WAVING, SMILING and signing autographs for the crowd ex-astronaut James Lovell came to Elk Grove Village Friday to preside over dedication ceremonies at Lindbergh Park. The space capsule displayed there is the only one in a park anywhere in the country.

'Hero's welcome' greets former astronaut Lovell

by JILL BETTNER

Mr. Spaceman in a business suit, you're still an All-American hero.

Kids competed with their parents for autographs Friday, when Jim Lovell, astronaut turned insurance executive, arrived in Elk Grove Village to dedicate a very special park.

Blue eyes twinkling with toothy boyish grins, the former space traveler was the fitting guest of honor in ceremonies at Lindbergh Park.

The park is the only one in the country displaying a real NASA space capsule, and besides that, it's located on West Glenn Trail, just down the street from Lovell Court.

A SUMMER DELUGE that forced most of the ceremonies inside nearby Adolph Link School didn't deter the crowd of several hundred who came to get a look at one of the first men to orbit the moon.

No, it's not made out of green cheese, Lovell laughed in answer to one of the many youngsters who eagerly bombarded him with questions about what it's like up there.

As Village Trustee Nanci Vanderweel said in her welcoming remarks during the ceremony, the kids were living history and loving every minute.

Like a Pied Piper of the space age,

Brownies and Cub Scouts decked out in uniform and hordes of other youngsters followed the astronaut everywhere.

Park Board Pres. Edward Hauser presented the astronaut with a plaque featuring a reproduction of the Lindbergh Park spacecraft, dubbed "002."

IN THANKING residents of Lovell Court for a framed picture of the street sign bearing his name, Lovell said he was flattered and added, "I just hope you enjoy living there." He later toured the neighborhood where welcoming signs and flags, dripping from the rain, dotted the area.

Exclaiming over the space capsule, one of only four in the country released by NASA for public use, Lovell looked inside one of the windows and said, "Hey, there's still somebody in there!"

The neighborhood kids all know the space capsule, installed on its own special landing pad a few weeks ago, is a great thing to climb on and explore.

Lovell also filled them in on a little bit of its history, too, explaining that the vehicle was one of the first made in the Apollo program and was used to test the landing capabilities of that particular type of spacecraft.

After being assisted in ribbon-cutting duties by Cub Scout Jim Sumnerfield and Brownie Michelle Hartan, the ex-astronaut posed for more pictures, signed more autographs and answered more questions.

IT WAS ALL in a day's work for Lovell, who retired from space traveling about two years ago and is now national advertising spokesman for Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co.

That means appearances, such as the one in Elk Grove Village where he was accompanied by several other insurance representatives, are his job. But Lovell said he misses the thrill of flying those giant craft and the unparalleled adventure of space exploration.

"If people are interested in the space program — and they sure still seem to be — I'm interested in helping out whenever I can," he said.

No manned trips to moon seen until 21st Century

Ex-astronaut James Lovell told Elk Grove Village businessmen Friday he does not foresee another manned moon flight before the turn of the century.

Addressing the group of Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce members prior to Lindbergh Park dedication ceremonies, Lovell discussed the future of the space program and recreated some of his own experiences.

"I don't see anyone going back to the moon before the turn of the century because of plans for the Earth shuttle," Lovell said. "It's a beneficial program because, as you know, we're all on a spacecraft here with limited resources. We need to know more about how to use those resources."

RECALLING SOME of the questions he said he is asked most often, Lovell described the feeling of weightlessness, getting his "Earth legs" back after a flight and his thoughts during the first manned journey to the moon as a member of the Apollo 8 crew.

The trip was a "humbling experience," he said.

"I think the thing that amazed me most is that everything is relative. The farther away you get from the Earth, the smaller it becomes," he said. "On Earth, we measure progress along a road by small towns and stoplights. When you're traveling at 17,500 miles per hour, you look down and you're over Africa. Then you say, 'Let's wait a little bit and have lunch over South America.' It gives you a sense of humility."

The first men to ever see the back side of the moon, Lovell said the entire crew was captivated by the sights.

"It was like ancient history looking at us," he said. "We were like three tourists checking maps to see if we could see the various craters and snapping pictures like crazy."

Probably best known as the commander of the Apollo 13 flight in April 1970, when the space vehicle was seriously damaged by an in-flight explosion, Lovell was asked if he and other astronauts admitted to each other being scared.

"SURE WE WERE scared. When you're 200,000 miles away from home and going the wrong way, it's upsetting," he said. "But we all knew it could happen when we took the job. We knew the risks."

Laughing in reply to a question on whether the astronauts really drank Tang, Lovell said the Florida Citrus Growers Commission didn't think the General Foods commercials were funny at all and raised such a fuss the space travelers began drinking the real thing.

Although he feels it will be several years before other men and probably women share Lovell's experiences, the ex-astronaut emphasized that American space exploration has only just begun.

"It's slowed down right now, but I think the space program has been put in the proper perspective along with other governmental programs," he said. "If and when we have enough money, I'm sure you'll see us getting back into it."

WARREN AND IRENE Spaulding reminisce about their Mount Prospect neighborhood. A faster-paced suburban life has changed it in 25 years.

Suburbs no longer have 'pioneer spirit'

Life's hustle and bustle leave too little time for neighbors

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

When Warren and Irene Spaulding moved to the Prospect Meadows subdivision in 1951, they and their neighbors were suburban pioneers.

Families borrowed each others' cars, went picnicking at Lake Zurich and shared the block's single telephone.

The Spauldings have watched Prospect Meadows change for 25 years. Neighbors have come and gone and gradually, something has been lost. The sense of community the Spauldings enjoyed has been pushed out by a faster-paced suburban life that provides little time for neighborliness.

THE COUPLE will move from their house on Oriole Lane next month, leaving Mount Prospect for retirement in Florida. They will miss the old times most.

The former GIs and their families who bought homes in the early years were "a very friendly neighborhood," said Mrs. Spaulding. All the women were housewives, and they gathered for poker parties and exercise classes after dropping off their husbands at the commuter station. There was a time when 15 or 16 children would play in the Spauldings' front yard.

Almost everything was community property then, Mrs. Spaulding said. "We thought nothing of loaning cars or making trips into town for a neighbor," she said. "And in those days, if someone's kid misbehaved we'd give him a good whack or two."

BUT THINGS have changed on Oriole Lane. Only three or four original owners still live in the 16 homes. Younger families move in and out of the area almost yearly.

The coffee klatches and neighborhood picnics at Lake Zurich have been replaced by "a growing majority" of working mothers, said Mrs. Spaulding, who has no children and has not worked since World War II. The children usually stay in their own yards, and if they misbehave now "it's strictly hands off," she said.

"The kids have really changed," she said. "Seems like all we hear nowadays are sirens from Prospect High School or hot rods at 3 a.m."

BOTH THE CHILDREN and their parents stay to themselves, Mrs. Spaulding said. "Block parties are passe," she added. "With both parents working, there's no time for chitchat. People just don't want to get involved."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

Stocks up 10 points

by RICHARD HUGHES

The rate of inflation was cut in half, spendable income has increased and orders for manufactured products rose for the second consecutive month, government economic statistics showed Friday.

Investors were encouraged. The Dow Jones Industrial Index of the New York Stock Exchange, which rose 17.52 points Thursday, made strong gains again Friday.

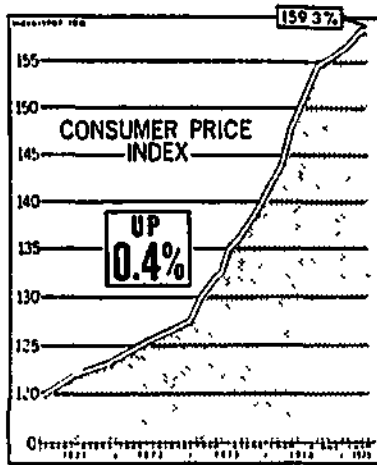

The Dow closed 10.09 points higher at 845.35. Analysts said the strong market, which had been in the doldrums for several weeks, was the result of brighter prospects for economic recovery.

The White House called the increase of 0.4 per cent in the consumer price index for May "a continuation of the significant reduction of inflationary pressures."

The increase, which translates into an annual inflationary rate of about 5 per cent, is less than half the double-digit increases of a year ago.

It came as the result of lower prices on some food stuffs, new cars and clothing, and relatively small increases for household products and supplies and alcoholic drinks.

An 8.1 increase in the consumer price index was reported in Chicago during the year which ended last month. But William E. Rice, regional director for the bureau, said prices in May dropped .3 per cent, the sharpest monthly drop since January, 1967.

THE COST OF living rose 0.4 per cent in May, while the consumer-price index stood at 159.3 per cent, which means that $100 worth of goods and services in 1967 cost $159.30 in May.

Prices for these consumer items offset higher prices for meat, used cars and gasoline which rose a penny a gallon because of President Ford's 2 import duty on foreign oil.

The Labor Dept. also said a tax cut designed to stimulate the economy pushed spendable income 4.4 per cent higher for the average worker. This means spendable income rose to almost equal what it was a year ago after several months of erosion.

The average worker with three dependents had spendable income of $145.44 in May after deductions for federal taxes and social security and adjustments for higher prices.

The Commerce Dept. said orders of durable goods — everything from jet fighters to washing machines — rose last month by 1.4 per cent, following a substantial increase of 9.2 per cent in April.

It was the first two-month increase in orders since June and July of last year. The increase pushed the level of orders to $39.30 billion, the highest level since last November's $43.18 billion.

In other developments:
• Wilson & Co., closed its Omaha, Neb., meat plant for three weeks because of adverse economic conditions. The company asked 900 employees to take their vacations or leaves of absence.

• A U.S. Steel Corp. spokesman said the steel industry doesn't expect improvement in sales until later this year. "Certainly, whatever happens to the American economy is reflected in steel on a delayed basis," he said.

Sam Giancana

Giancana -- from thief to mobster

'Momo' gunned down in his Oak Park home

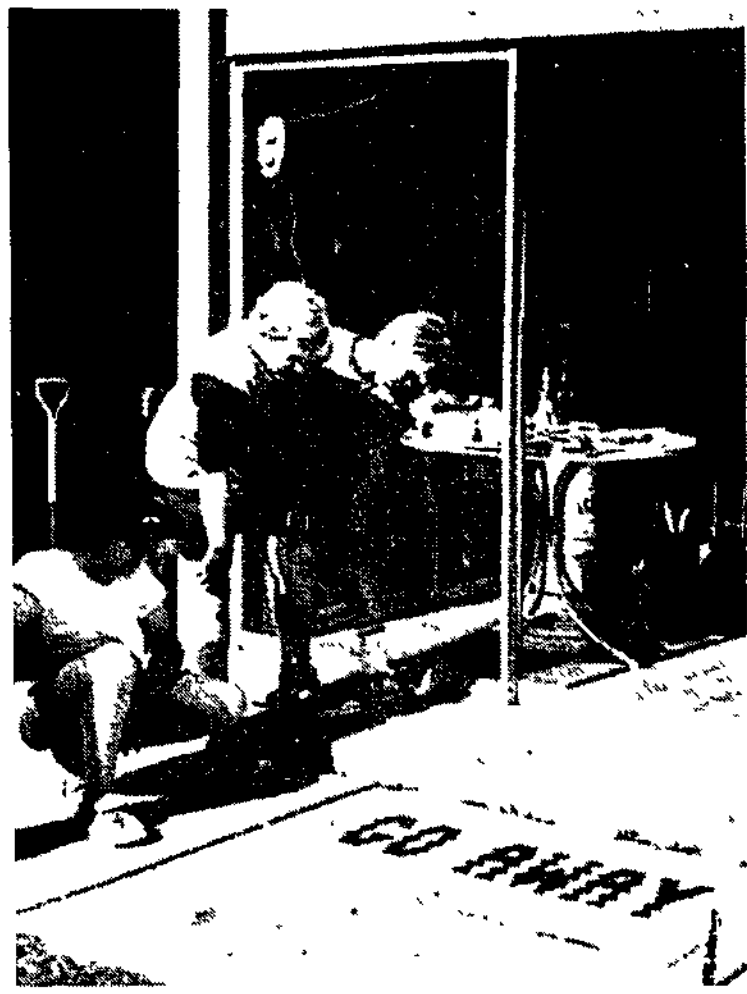

Sam Giancana, 65, onetime Chicago syndicate head who was found shot to death in his Oak Park home late Thursday, was a former playboy chieftain of the Chicago crime syndicate who was named recently in an alleged mob-linked CIA plot to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Investigators Friday sought leads to his killer in his international financial dealings for the syndicate, in the reports that he was approached to line up a "hit man" to kill Castro, and in the enemies he made in a 50-year career that took him from common car thief to top mobster to years of exile in Latin America.

Giancana was known variously as "Momo," "Moe," and "Moonney." He was born the son of an immigrant grocer and in World War II frankly told his local draft board, "I steal for a living." Psychiatrists rejected him for military duty, saying he "has an inadequate personality, a constitutional psychopathic state and strong antisocial trends."

Working his way up through syndicate ranks, he was jailed twice — on moonshining and burglary convictions — but escaped a murder rap after the key witness was slain.

When gang chief Tony "Big Tuna" Accardo was elevated to titular "chairman of the board" in 1956, Giancana took over the syndicate reins. He came under sharp surveillance by the FBI and was jailed for a year in 1955 for refusing to answer a federal grand jury's questions.

When he was freed in 1956 he fled to Latin America for eight years of self-imposed exile, during which investigators said he apparently kept busy investing mob money around the world. Mexico deported him to the United States in 1974 and Giancana again was subpoenaed by a federal grand jury.

Peter F. Vaira, chief of the Justice Dept. strike force against organized crime here, said Giancana "didn't say very much" in at least two appearances before the grand jury and federal authorities were considering having him indicted for perjury.

Strike force attorney Douglas P. Rofler said the grand jury had not been delving into reports — outlined in Senate investigating committee documents recently — that Giancana had been approached in an alleged CIA plot to kill Castro. He said the grand jury probe of Giancana's dealings was limited to post-June 1966 and the anti-Castro plot was reputed to have been hatched in 1961.

In Washington, the Senate intelligence committee disclosed Friday that it had tried to contact Giancana for possible testimony about the alleged administration plot against Castro.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., the committee's vice chairman, told reporters: "We have noted with interest that he was done away with. He had been contacted by some of our staff. The committee had not taken the decision to call on him as a witness."

Tower could shed no light on speculation that Giancana was murdered because of the possibility he might be called to testify before the Senate committee.

A tax credit is an amount subtracted from taxes owed.

Soviets make new advance in nuclear missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Sec. James R. Schlesinger said Friday the Soviet Union has deployed a new series of nuclear missiles with multiple warheads — so a single rocket could carry atomic bombs aimed at more than one target.

Soviet deployment of MIRVs, short for multiple independently targetable re-entry vehicle, had been anticipated for some time.

The United States already has MIRVs in its land-based Minuteman 3 and submarine-launched Poseidon missiles and Schlesinger said, "We will not allow our position in this area to become secondary."

On other topics, Schlesinger:

• Said that with a proper civil defense program, about 50 million American lives could be saved in an all-out nuclear war.

• Confirmed that the United States was distributing training packets to the Air Force so bomber crews would work on plans for fighting a limited nuclear war.

• Confirmed publicly for the first time that the United States has tactical nuclear weapons in Korea.

• Confirmed that the assignment of additional Poseidon-carrying nuclear submarines to the Atlantic Alliance was "under consideration."

• Said the Russians have increased their number of submarine-launched missiles to the point — 740 under the SALT agreement — that they must reduce their number of short-range land missiles.

• Said the Russians have mounted a formidable effort in chemical warfare, 12-15 times that of the United States. He said if conventional forces could not withstand a chemical attack, "we will not eliminate any option," including nuclear weapons.

Israel firm in keeping Golan Heights

by United Press International

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin unveiled Israel's plan for a permanent peace settlement with the Arab states Friday and said President Ford indicated it was not acceptable.

In an interview with the Israeli newspaper Ma'ariv, Rabin said he told Ford Israel will never return to its pre-1967 borders. He said Israel would insist on keeping Syria's Golan Heights and the eastern portion of Egypt's Sinai Peninsula and considered military control of the occupied West Bank of Jordan vital to its security.

Rabin's disclosures came as President Ford and Sec. of State Henry Kissinger met in Washington with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam in the final round of talks with the principals in the Middle East crisis as part of the reassessment of U.S. policy there.

Khaddam came to Washington at the invitation of the White House. Ford and Kissinger recently reviewed the situation with Egyptian Pres. Anwar Sadat and Rabin.

In Beirut, Arab World, an authoritative daily newsletter, said Friday Syria now possesses "a new generation" of Soviet weapons that are "the most sophisticated ever to be sent to the Arab countries by Moscow." It gave no details.

Rabin said Israel wants a federation with Jordan to govern the West Bank, "based on a united, Israeli Jerusalem, open borders and free trade with Jordan, Israeli control of security and Jewish rights to settlement."

He said he explained the plan to Ford at their meeting in Washington last week, but:

"... the president did not react or identify with any of the suggestions. I assume that these ideas were not accepted by the American administration."

Rabin said Israel is ready to make some changes in the front lines with Syria but "we will not come down from the Golan Heights."

Threat of rail strike ends

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After all-night negotiations, management and the railroad clerks union agreed Friday to talk for another 30 days in hopes of averting a nationwide railway strike.

The extra time means that there cannot be a walkout — and a major shutdown of U.S. rail service — before July 21.

The negotiations involve a contract between the national Railway Labor Conference, representing rail management, and the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees. Their last contract expired Dec. 31, 1974, and mediation was started Jan. 10.

The union, which represents 131,000 rail workers, was legally free to strike at 12:01 a.m. Monday, after exhausting all legal bargaining procedures set up to encourage transportation settlements without work stoppages.

A strike by the clerks would almost certainly shut down most of the nation's rail service because other union members would refuse to cross picket lines.

Ford, Wallace now make it official

• President Ford's campaign for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination formally began Friday with the registration of a new political committee to raise and spend funds on his behalf. Meanwhile...

• Gov. George C. Wallace, in a letter to one million contributors, has finally announced he will seek the Democratic nomination for president. Earlier, Wallace had said he would be "involved" in the election.

• Sean "Uncle Jim" Moore in McCall, Idaho, Friday broke the world record for endurance drumming at 218 hours 46 minutes and settled down to a happy beat he hopes to keep up until 6 p.m. Sunday.

• G. Gordon Liddy "has not shown the slightest remorse or regret," said U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica Friday in refusing to give the Watergate mastermind's plea for a reduction of his prison sentence.

• Television writer and producer Rod Serling will undergo open heart surgery next week in Rochester, N.Y.

• The Rev. L. Peter Beebe was convicted Friday of violating Episcopal canon laws and disobeying his bishop by inviting two illegally ordained women priests to celebrate communion at his church in Oberlin, Ohio. He said he would continue to defy his superiors.

• Gary Gillespie, 21, and Richard Lebo, 37, were in Galveston, Tex., Friday recovering after drifting for 13 days nearly 500 miles across the Gulf of Mexico in a small boat.

• Elvis Presley spent two days at a Memphis Hospital for an extensive eye examination, according to the singer's personal physician.

State may give schools break on aid formula

by JUDY JOBBITT

The Illinois General Assembly is considering an amendment that would give financial relief to school districts hit by declining enrollment.

State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, has introduced an amendment to the state-aid formula bill that would give school districts the option of using average daily attendance for the past three years in figuring their state-aid claims.

The amendment would give Cook County suburban school districts an additional $7.2 million in state aid for the 1976-77 school year.

JAFFE SAID the amendment eases the financial crunch for school districts with declining enrollment because state aid would not drop as sharply in such a short period.

The major factors in figuring state aid are enrollment and the district's property-tax rate. Districts lose state aid when either enrollment drops or the district is not taxing at the maximum level allowed by the state.

Currently school districts must use the past two years' average attendance to estimate the student population and state aid for the coming year. If the enrollment does not meet the district's projections, the district must pay back the excess state aid the following year.

Districts are caught in a two-way bind through this formula because they receive less state aid for fewer students and must pay back funding already received if enrollment comes in lower than anticipated. Districts also find the budget does not decrease at the same pace as state aid.

BY USING a three-year average, Jaffe said the financial drop would be more gradual and would help districts adjust over a longer period of time.

Eight elementary school districts in the Northwest suburban area are suffering from declining enrollment. Schaumburg Township Dist. 64 is still benefiting from the current formula because of pupil population increases each year.

"It would not hurt anybody," Jaffe said. "It could only help."

Jaffe said about $29 million would be added statewide to the state aid funding for the 1976-77 school year if the proposal is approved. Figures on the amount individual districts would receive under the amendment are not available.

Daniel Suffoletto, Arlington Heights Dist. 25 business manager, said the amendment "would help us. How much I don't know. It gives us something to look toward in two years."

DIST. 25 had 600 fewer students this year than last year and expects to drop another 1,200 students in the next two years.

J. C. Busenhart, Mount Prospect Dist. 57 business manager, said "anything that would help the state aid would be welcome." Dist. 57 is closing one school next year to cut down on costs from declining enrollment and faces the possibility of closing another school within two years.

He said with the amendment the impact of declining enrollment aid would not be felt as soon which would give a district more time to adjust its budget and programs.

ON THE JOB. Kirk Center students Michael Stalley, Hoffman Estates, left, and Michael Anders, Hanover Park, are two of seven young people working at area companies through the center's secondary work experience program. Six Northwest suburban companies were recently honored by Kirk Center, Palatine, for providing jobs for handicapped students. The firms are Burger King Inc., Hoffman Estates; D.A.V.C.O. Inc., Arlington Heights; Holiday Inn, Mount Prospect; Honeywell Inc., Arlington Heights; McDonald's Inc., and Northrup Inc., Rolling Meadows. The center serves Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships.

Dedication finally gets off the ground

The countdown was 10 months long, but ex-astronaut James Lovell finally launched dedication ceremonies for Elk Grove Village's Lindbergh Park with its NASA space capsule Friday.

Shipping hazards topic of trade meet

The International Trade Club of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce will meet Wednesday to discuss hazards in overseas shipping.

The luncheon meeting is set for noon at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn, 1000 Busse Rd.

Larry Graf of Roanoke Insurance Co. and Mike Voelck of the Insurance Co. of North America will discuss modern packing and handling techniques in shipping merchandise overseas as well as numerous hazards involved in oceanic transport.

The International Trade Club was formed by the association last fall to aid local companies in finding new or expanding present foreign trade markets.

Blood drawing next week for industrial park

Employees from two Elk Grove Village plants will donate blood Tuesday in the third industrial blood drawing that benefits both the village and workers' hometown communities.

The industrial park's Group Sure-blood Program and the village's Community Blood-Assurance program both are sponsored by the North Suburban Blood Center.

When someone donates for the group through the industrial program, the donation also counts for his community if it participates in the North Suburban Center's program.

In this way those workers who live in Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Deerfield, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates or Mount Prospect, towns that participate in the program, can make their blood donation count twice.

Those donors who live in communities without a program may request their donations be counted for Elk Grove Village.

Trustee Nancy Vanderweel, program chairman, said the expansion of the village's blood program to include the working community benefits both. "Workers who live in communities like Chicago have a chance to belong to a program that guarantees their whole family free, unlimited volunteer blood when they need it, and the village also benefits," she said.

Firms participating in Tuesday's drawing are Sola Electric Co. and Schwinn Inc. Sales Division. Additional information about signups or the program may be obtained by calling 439-3900.

School board unaware why Bedard quit post

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 has a board of education without a leader.

In a surprise move Thursday, Edward Bedard resigned as president of the board, a position he was appointed to by a unanimous vote of the board two months ago. Bedard's fellow board members Friday said they were shocked by the resignation and could find no reason for it. They said Bedard has been an excellent leader.

Bedard Friday said a good president must "represent the board, its decisions and the process of living at its decisions." He said "recent events" have put him in a position where he could no longer serve as the board's representative.

BEDARD DECLINED to comment on those events but said they have nothing to do with the board's decision Thursday to renovate Blackhawk School, are not related to his attempt to reorganize the board in recent weeks and are not connected to his business interests as a manufacturing representative.

"The basic conflict I have is that I don't believe they're acting in the matter in which I as board president should represent them," Bedard said. He would not reveal the actions he objects to but said the matter would become clear by the end of his term on the board next April.

Bedard did say the neutrality expected of the leader of the board in presiding over meetings is part of his decision to resign. In the past, Bedard has been an outspoken board member and has often played the role of the devil's advocate in discussions of board matters. As president, Bedard said he is often unable to step into the role.

The Dist. 54 board made several unsuccessful attempts to name a new leader Thursday. Five board members were nominated for president but the board members either declined the nomination or did not win a majority of votes of the seven-member board.

BOARD MEMBERS Gordon Thoren, Esther Karras and Bedard were nominated after the resignation but declined the post. Brenda Pulla and Margaret Pageler also were nominated but did not receive a majority vote.

Board Secy. Gordon Thoren will serve as the board's liaison to district officials until the board can elect a president. The board's next regular meeting is July 1.

Board member Sherry Reynolds said she was "totally surprised" by Bedard's resignation. "I thought he was a very good leader. I thought he provided direction and leadership when it was needed," she said. She said she does not know the reason for the resignation. "My feeling is that the board obviously needs to reorganize and redirect its effort in a more unified direction. I don't see any crisis."

Home canners: heed advice of scientists

This promises to be a less traumatic year for home canners than last year when jars, covers and seals were dreadfully short. The paucity led many people into high-risk shortcuts, like using mayonnaise jars. Some who have long used such jars protested furiously when the experts advised strongly against it. I shuddered over the obstinacy of some letter-writers who insisted they knew best and that those who advised caution were meddling do-gooders.

For people who want to can properly, the best advice is to heed the government scientists who test canning procedures regularly, as well as those with the National Canning Assn. The basics are to use good quality food — no bruises or soft spots and no overripe food as products change in chemical composition with age.

Even after proper canning, there are certain precautions to be taken. If there are no signs of spoilage, bad color, mold or leakage, home-canned food should be brought to a rolling boil in a saucepan, covered, then boiled for 10 minutes. Meats, spinach and corn require a 20-minute boil. Highly important: no tasting before this procedure.

If you don't have a good canning book, send for the one issued by the Department of Agriculture. It costs 35 cents. Write to Consumer Product Information, Public Documents Distribution Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009, asking for G-8, "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables." If you still have questions, don't hesitate to call the county extension agent.

Dear Dorothy: About 30 years ago, I was told how to get rid of and deter weevils. It was to put confectioner's sugar and borax under the shelf paper. I don't use shelf paper so put envelopes containing this combination on each shelf. I've never used a spray, just wash the shelves well and use the borax and confectioner's sugar. It may help any number of worried homemakers.

Dear Dorothy: What can you tell about the hanging plant "lipstick" — generic name, its care and so on?

—Mrs. Dorothy Blair

You're talking about the trailing plant with green leaves and orange or red blossoms. Formal name: Aeschynanthus lobbianus (don't ask me to pronounce it). The stems should be cut back after flowering. It likes warm, humid weather and does well in sunny bathrooms. It needs fertilizing every three weeks.

LAWN BOWLING

People in England have had fun bowling on the grass for more than 800 years. Now lawn bowling is popular with Canadians and people in the eastern part of our country, too. Here's a modern way to play this old game with croquet balls. Make sure the grass is cut very short and evenly.

Put one ball (the "jack") in the middle of the lawn. Players stand back as far as possible from it. They take turns rolling their ball at the "jack." After each has had a turn, any ball touching the "jack" earns 3 points. If no ball touches it, the nearest ball scores 1 point. First player to score 21 points wins.

Players may form two teams instead of playing individually. Scoring is done after all players have rolled. Each ball belonging to one team that is closer to the "jack" than the nearest ball from the other team earns 1 point.

Some antiques dealers can't cope with public

One of the positives about moving to a new area is the opportunity to survey the local antique "digs," but I lived here in southern Illinois two whole months before I visited any shops. Now, that's restraint. I had a listing of the shops in the area from a friend who travels in her work, but she hadn't been impressed with any she had seen. In the meantime, I had heard of a couple others.

Early one morning I went strawberry picking with a new friend, another transplanted northerner, and her two little girls. We picked our quota of berries in such a short time that we decided to look for a couple of antique shops located near the strawberry farm. We found one, a large warehouse type place, which sold everything from Indian arrowheads to Depression glass, and I felt the prices were not too high. The proprietors were pleasant and told us the locations of a couple of their competitors, recommending one in particular.

WE DROVE UP to the pillared red brick "Old South" type home which announced "Antiques" on a slightly askew and paint-peeling sign out front. Several smaller hand-printed signs affixed to the front door admonished the visitor: "We do not carry Depression glass," "Children must be held by hand," and "If locked ring bell." The last notation seemed friendlier than the first two, so we rang the bell, but saw no signs of life at the smaller house next door (where the bell rang presumably). Our noses pressed against the front windows of the shop yielded glimpses of an interesting interior, and we left with regret.

Even if we had been seen by the owner, we decided, we probably weren't considered very good customer possibilities, with our stained berry-picking clothes, two little girls and a beat-up economy car. So, we went on our way to the next little town and found a marvelous, garrulous junk dealer with room after room of pure rummage sale cast-offs and an inclination to talk with us all day. We escaped, and on our way home passed the pillared place again.

THIS TIME THE door stood open, possibly because a huge luxury car with Texas plates was parked out front and some definitely non-berry picking types were climbing the front stairs. We parked next to the Texas torpedo and followed the crowd.

The little girls held our hands as per the posted rules and we entered with a cheery "Hi!" to the glassy-eyed proprietress who stood, with blue hair and end-of-the-nose glasses, firmly at attention behind the cash register. She barely acknowledged our greeting and turned her attention to the Texans. They all discussed some of the merchandise, which really was high quality, and we took the opportunity to gawk and admire, until she noticed us again.

"Is there something I can help you with?" she asked. (I learned long ago it's best to have something definite in mind — these types don't want to hear "I'm just browsing") so I said brightly, "Do you by any chance have any Hummingbird pattern glass?" "I haven't had pattern glass for years," she snapped. "You just can't get it any more." And she turned back to her proffered customers.

MY NEW FRIEND, thoroughly intimidated by the owner's brusque manner, nudged me to leave, so we did. At the same time the Texans thanked her profusely and "wished they had a trailer along so they could really load up, but they didn't have a speck of room in their car, honey." The owner lost interest in them immediately, too.

"Whew," puffed my companion, "I'm glad they're not all like that one!" We stopped at a couple more shops where the atmosphere was warmer. Actually, one crab out of five shops wasn't a bad percentage!

Better half

Women are better in the dark than men, are quicker at learning languages, have better memories, hear more sounds and are more sensitive. These are among the findings of psychologist Dr. Diane McGuinness, reported in The National Enquirer.

California-born Dr. McGuinness conducted a four-year study at London University involving 400 men, women and children. "I'm not saying that women are superior to men — just that they're different," she says.

Columnist's Episcopal overkill

It is something of a phenomenon that political pundits such as William Buckley, James Kilpatrick, Smith Hempstone and Carl Rowan have all devoted advisory columns to the nation's 3 million Episcopalians.

Buckley, Kilpatrick and Hempstone, in advising this denomination against adopting an extraordinarily inept revision of its classic Book of Common Prayer, all show evidence that at least they are acquainted with this subject.

By striking contrast, columnist Rowan reveals himself as an almost total innocent about the denomination, in writing a column entitled "Galling Episcopal Logic on Women and Priesthood."

To begin with, this headline is inaccurate because the word "Episcopalian" is a noun and not an adjective. But maybe Rowan didn't write the headline.

MIDWAY THROUGH this Episcopal column, Mr. Rowan refers to the obligation of bishops to obey archbishops — an extraordinarily difficult requirement since there is in the entire United States not a single Episcopal archbishop (and no obligation to obey any Anglican archbishops overseas).

Rowan concludes his column with yet another historic blunder:

"I would cringe no more were I at Salem watching people cursing witches while putting wood around the stakes."

Columnist Rowan may cringe a lot more when he learns that no woman was ever burned at the stake in Salem, Mass.

He may also possibly come to realize that this comparison of today's Episcopal Church with Salem's 17th Century witch executions (by hanging) is rhetorical overkill. So is his implication that today's Episcopal hierarchy is "as discipline-minded as any military command system any Puritan ever devised."

SUCH A description, when applied to almost any of the nation's Episcopal bishops, amounts to the same kind of hilarious absurdity as confusing ostriches with eagles.

Yet Mr. Rowan goes even further, by writing:

"The hierarchy of the Episcopal Church is out to crucify those priests who have done nothing more than give effect to their convictions that women as much as men may claim to be the messengers of God."

The very idea that any of the bishops have "crucifixion" in mind, for such adopt public relations men as the Rev. Messrs. William Wendt or Peter Beebe, is the equivalent of confusing the Face International with Murder Inc.

MR. ROWAN'S prose also begs the question as to when he will issue an encyclical dealing with the wicked sexism of non-episcopal nuns. For Rowan has ruled that current Episcopal Church law excluding women from the priesthood is "cruel, enslavement to prejudices that antedate the Dark Ages."

Even if this overblown premise were granted, the fact remains that the Rev. Messrs. Wendt of Washington and Beebe of Ohio were neither enslaved or even drafted when, quite voluntarily, they swore to God that they would obey Episcopal Church law — this on the day they were ordained.

Rowan describes these two as "Men of Conscience," even though they both have publicly and proudly, violated this oath rather than resigning from this allegedly sexist priesthood (and their salaries).

Maybe Mr. Rowan feels that on the days when these two were ordained and took these vows, they were "Boys of Conscience."

HE WRITES: "I watched the Episcopal Church put the Rev. William Wendt on trial here for permitting a woman to celebrate communion. And I neither wrote or spoke a single word of protest."

But after this momentary good sense expressed in his lead paragraph, Mr. Rowan confesses (finally, after Beebe was also put to trial) "I'm now convinced that what I thought was impossible is really happening."

It is indeed. For this denomination still includes some people — many of whom favor female ordination — who still believe that vows should be taken seriously — even if other like Mr. Rowan feel that this is "absurd business."

10% cut in premiums seen with no-fault

WASHINGTON (UPI) — State Farm, the nation's largest auto insurer, is predicting an average 10 percent drop in premiums for private passenger cars under no-fault legislation now pending in Congress, it was disclosed Thursday.

Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, said in releasing the figures that they were in "sharp contrast" to those provided earlier by another major auto insurance company, Allstate, which forecast an average 17 percent price hike for its policies if the bill becomes law.

FAA action long overdue

Once again, the problem of excessive noise from airplane traffic at O'Hare International Airport has been attacked by local citizens, and once again, there's been little progress in reducing the noise.

Last week, a group called the National Organization to Insure a Sound Controlled Environment (NOISE) re-reviewed the problem in a conference in Schiller Park, and once again the lack of federal progress in curbing excessive noise at O'Hare was a major topic.

"Nothing, zero, zil, will be done until the industry is forced to do it . . . We cannot continue to ignore the suffering created by jet noise," said Park Ridge Mayor Martin Butler, the president of NOISE.

Butler and others underscored the obvious problem: Little has been done, either on a voluntary basis by the airlines, or on orders from the Federal Aviation Administration, which is supposed to regulate the airlines but always seems reluctant to order them to do anything.

There are devices and techniques available to soften the roar of jet engines, but all an FAA official could manage to offer at last week's conference was the prediction that it will make a decision this year on engine-muffling systems and landing-pattern changes.

The FAA's inaction has prompted a lawsuit from Illinois Attorney General William Scott; however, the FAA isn't the only body guilty of inaction. The City of Chicago, which controls O'Hare, has been unwilling to cooperate with groups seeking noise reduction.

U.S. Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, in commenting during the meetings that the FAA has moved too slowly, suggested that Congressional hearings are the next step in putting pressure on the FAA.

We support congressional hearings, for they can help make the FAA accountable to the public it is supposed to serve. We encourage Sen. Charles Percy and Reps. Abner Mikva, D-10th, and Philip M. Crane, R-12th, to join in support of hearings. Their support could help end the excuses and buck-passing which has marked FAA "action" on noise.

O'Hare is always going to offer noise problems, and we'll always have to suffer from some inconvenience from the presence of this giant facility. But that's no excuse for the lack of federal action in making our lives in the Northwest suburbs a little more peaceful.

Some non-smokers annoy her

I have been trying to cut down on my smoking this week because last week I went to a million meetings at a convention and smoked like a smudge pot in Florida at frost time. The convention was for exchanging information and ideas, and although it was not designed to be a seminar on the use and users of tobacco I learned a lot about that too.

There are, as we all know, smokers and non-smokers.

There are also almost-non-smokers who bum.

Some bums are nice people whose almost-habit I don't mind supplying, but a few could give obnoxious lessons. Not only do they never buy any cigarettes of their own, but they complain about the brand I smoke.

Genuine non-smokers also come in two varieties — nice and not nice — and because of the latter I feel moved to write a defense for us smokers. Most of us are kindly people who obey "No Smoking" signs, devoutly avoid burning holes in things and use a lot of breath fresheners so that we do not offend.

At the convention meetings we thoughtfully bunched together downwind of the others and at lunchtime we did not force our smelly selves upon their company. Nevertheless there were a few who snorted, smiled and fanned the air if we got within ten feet of them. They're how come I'm going to design a button that reads, "Yes, I mind if you mind if I smoke."

EDITORIAL: The Regional Transportation Authority shouldn't serve Chicago at the expense of the suburbs.

Lighting stand blasted

Your editorial of June 16 against sodium vapor street lights, to me, reflects your archaic, conservative attitude and refusal to acknowledge the true facts about life in the Northwest suburbs.

I live less than a block from one of the Buffalo Grove test lights, in use for several months. The only place the light "bathes" in an orange sodium glow is the pavement of the street. You can't even see the glow from the light until you are quite close to the intersection. True, this is due to a special shield installed by the Public Works Dept., but I understand that this type of shield will be used on all lights installed. If so, the lights will not be offensive. And if they save money I stand by the village board's decision to use this type of light.

I feel problems are problems, and the same problems, no matter where you go, city or suburb. They only vary in degree. Keeping your head in the sand won't make them go away. Positive action is the solution. If Chicago had "turned thumbs down" on the sodium vapor lights, would you still be against them?

Reader questions stadium plans

I attended the June 9 meeting of the Arlington Heights village finance committee meeting in which Madison Square Garden Corp. presented its plans to have Arlington Heights finance their stadium in the form of general obligation bonds. I feel I must indicate to you my total opposition on two key issues.

While I realize that the village board cannot indefinitely refuse to countenance plans for development of the race track properties, I feel that this particular package resembles one of these pieces of legislation where one is compelled to oppose some good notions simply because a very bad idea is included as part of the package. As a homeowner and taxpayer I am totally opposed to a private corporation attempting to have me stand as a guarantor of their speculation. There is no way I desire that it be legally possible for my taxes to go up, if anything at all goes awry with the proposed stadium and its costs and profits. It does occur to me if any private sector would have been willing to take the risk in return for these splendid gains that we have been promised, then these people would not be here asking for the taxpayer to back them up.

On another matter, and one to me equally important, I came here to live on the assumption that it would be a residential community and not a mini-Las Vegas. I live a mile or so away from the proposed site of the stadium and I have no desire whatsoever to spend my evenings (even once a year) listening to amplified concerts which I do not wish to pay to hear or even hear for free. I do hope my fellow residents will not think of the proposed stadium as just the "Home of the Bears." It's not the eight or so home games that bother me; it's what the little pixies over at Madison Square Garden Corp. will dream up for us the other 357 days of the year. Quite frankly, I find the speculation mind-boggling.

Finally, I should re-emphasize my sympathy for the village board, but I feel this is an issue worth being brave about. Let us not imagine that if the stadium plans go ahead there will be much chance of complaining about the uses to which the facility is put. In short, it will be too late. I think we must ask ourselves, "What is the bait?" "Who is the hunter?" and "Who is the quarry?"

Backers thanked

The Arlington Heights branch of the Summit School Auxiliary, and the Summit School staff, wishes to extend its deepest gratitude and thanks to all the local patrons who so generously supported our annual fund raising charity ball held in April. A total of $16,000 was raised from this event which was then presented to our school director, Mrs. Ruth Tofanelli for Summit's scholarship fund. Without your help and generosity this would never have been possible. Again, we thank you for taking the time to help us for a very worthwhile endeavor. Summit School will begin its second year here in Arlington Heights at the First Presbyterian Church, 302 N. Dunton.

He hits juror reduction

In your June 6 edition you report that a commission of the Illinois State Bar Association has recommended the use of six-person juries in state and federal civil trials and in certain criminal trials. I would like to set the record straight. The recommendation came from a commission of the American Bar Assn. and has not been adopted by the Illinois State Bar Association. As a matter of fact, the board of governors of the Illinois State Bar Assn. is on record opposing a reduction in the number of jurors for both civil and criminal trials.

A discussion panel on the question of six-member juries in civil cases is scheduled for the 90th annual meeting of the Illinois State Bar Assn. June 22-25, 1975 at Lincolnshire, Illinois. The American Bar Association's house of delegates will consider the recommendations at its annual meeting in August.

Fence post Dead-end drive: success

Dear Jerry Thomas and Diane Merigas:

Thanks so much for doing in two weeks what I've tried to do in two years — make Douglas dead-end, as their signs signify.

It was a very frustrating experience and I am disappointed in Elk Grove's inability and unwillingness to enforce their own laws. Had I been asking them to make a main street dead-end to serve my needs, I would have expected a long battle. All I was asking was that they enforce their own signs: "Dead End" and "No Outlet."

Public response has been most heartwarming. One lovely gardener stopped by my house to express his concern and ask if it would be okay to park in the street and walk through to his plot. "If it would endanger our son, then he would not." Being conditioned by past cooperation, I thought he was being sarcastic but then realized, no, he was very sincere. Bless him!

A professional sign painter called and offered to donate a sign to replace stolen one. Since Elk Grove would not permit us to place anything on their roadway to prevent cars from driving on our lawn, I didn't feel they would welcome a new sign.

Needless to say, neighbor has not spoken to me since the article. Big loss! Now you know why, in supporting model farm on that property, I said, "I'd rather have a cow for a neighbor than some people. You know what to expect from a cow, but you never know what to expect from people."

Again, kisses to you all.

Offers bike rules

In this day of energy crises and encouragement of physical fitness, I cannot see the banning of bicycles on any street (reference to June 11 Fence Post letter, "Ban Bikes on Rand Road" by Roxane McLean).

Unsafe bicycle riders are definitely not to be tolerated! But banning is definitely not the answer. If (and that is gigantic "if") the police would take the bicycle seriously — it is definitely a "vehicle" and enforce the laws pertaining to bicycles, people would not disobey the laws as flagrantly as they do now.

- Rule: Ride on the right side of the street with, not against, traffic.
- Rule: Stop at stop lights and stop signs.
- Rule: Ride single file — one rider per bike.
- Rule: Bicycles are vehicles and must obey the identical traffic laws as automobiles. (See Uniform Traffic Code)

Bicycles can be the answer to traffic problems, auto pollution, the gas shortage and a healthier American person.

I honestly believe that, if the police in all the surrounding areas would strictly enforce the traffic laws with bicycles, that motorists would not have the complaints they now have, and a mutual respect would exist between motorist and cyclist.

The almanac

Today is Saturday, June 21, the 172nd day of 1975 with 193 to follow. This is the first day of summer.

The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

Martha Washington, first lady of the United States, was born June 21, 1731. This is American actress Jane Russell's 54th birthday.

On this day in history:

- In 1945, Japanese defenders of Okinawa Island surrendered to American troops.
- In 1960, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev said: "... War with capitalistic nations is not inevitable." Communist China replied: "War is inevitable as long as Western imperialism exists."
- In 1963, Cardinal Giovanni Battista Montini was elected pontiff of the Roman Catholic church. He chose to be called Pope Paul VI.
- In 1973, President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev signed an agreement on an 18-month effort to reach a permanent arms pact.

A thought for the day: British scientist Havelock Ellis said, "A man must now swallow more beliefs than he can digest."

Prep track spectacular at Prospect

by ART MUGALIAN

Today's Fourth Annual International Prep Invitational Track and Field Meet, scheduled for the oval at Prospect High School beginning at 12:30 p.m., is being touted as the greatest high school meet ever held.

With the national leaders in several events — including a couple of record-holders — on hand to perform their specialties, the claim seems to be valid.

Seven state champions from the IHSAA meet will compete, including state record-setters Nat Page in the high jump, Marv Edmonds in the 100-yard dash, and Eddie Hatch in the 440.

Co-record holders Ken Harding and Bruce Mahlig in the pole vault will also be there.

Page is just one of an unbelievable field of seven-foot high jumpers, which includes Rudy Reavis of New Rochelle, N.Y., who has reached 7-1½ and is headed for the U. of Illinois.

Edmonds is in a field of sprinters who have all logged :09.4 or better, and Hatch, who broke Bill Bahndt's "ancient" state record in the 440, is up against several sub-:47 quarter-milers.

The mile field is particularly strong as is the two-mile field. Ralph Serna of Anaheim, Cal. is the cream of both crops, however, with a 4:07 in the mile and an 8:45.9 in the two-mile.

Mahlig, of Schaumburg High School, is the top area entrant, along with milers Joe Paul of Maine West and Paul Klyon of Fremd, and Prospect's Trudi Rebsamen, who will run in the girls' 220-yard dash and the 880.

Rebsamen, this year's state champ in the girls' 440-yard dash, will be competing in the two girls' events which were added to the International card last year.

Another added feature will be the second running of the Chicagoland Mile Relay, matching 17 area conferences in three heats.

Running for the Mid-Suburban League will be Klyon, Mark Hoerich of Schaumburg, and Bill Mitsos and Mike Mitsos of Forest View. Hoerich is a two-time state qualifier in the 880 and the Mitsos brothers were the only senior members of Forest View's state qualifying mile relay team which ran a 3:22 in the district meet.

Today's meet, sponsored by the Coca-Cola Bottling Company, will begin with an Olympic-style parade of competitors in front of the stands, which meet promoters hope will be filled with 8,000 enthused track fans.

Many of them will be hoping to see good performances from the local entrants. For Mahlig, Paul, and Klyon, the International Meet will serve as a final opportunity for prep victory.

Watson holds Open lead

by PAUL LOGAN

MEDINAH — Lightning nearly struck twice in the same spot for Tom Watson here Friday.

Playing in the second round of the United States Open golf tournament, Watson came within a stroke of duplicating his opening day 67. The 68 he posted on the par 71 layout gave him a three-stroke lead after he shared it in the first round.

And then there was that other lightning.

"Just before we teed off, I invoked the lightning rule," explained Watson. He took shelter in the club house, but officials questioned whether his decision was justifiable.

"They went out to the first tee (to check) and then — all of a sudden — zap," he continued, referring to the bolt that struck near the course. "P. J. Boatwright (who runs the Open) apologized to me."

Play was suspended nearly an hour, but "the delay actually helped. I had time to relax a little bit. I had a sandwich and some tea."

Then this 25-year-old Missourian went out and mastered Medinah's "Monster" for the second straight day. He played the front nine in even par, offsetting a three-putt bogey at the second hole with a one-putt birdie at the fifth.

Birdies at the 16th and 11th were followed by six consecutive pars. He capped off his superb showing with a birdie at the 18th. Many of the 22,700 fans who turned out on this sultry day roared their approval.

That putt gave him a three-stroke bulge on his closest competitor, Ben Crenshaw, and also tied the Open record for a two-day total. When asked how he felt about having this advantage, Watson said:

"My main feeling is patience. I have to play it hole by hole and shot by shot. The only time I can afford to look back is on Sunday from the 18th green."

Last year he held a one-shot lead after three rounds before he exploded on the final day, finishing tied for fifth. Watson said this time he felt the same — "confident of my ability."

"The pressure is greater than in other tournaments. The pressure's there and it's constant. It's just something that I have to live with for two days."

"I don't think so," he said when asked if he planned to attack the course any differently because of his lead. "I have a definite game plan on how to play this golf course. I think I'll stick with my driver (instead of playing conservatively on the narrow, tree-lined layout)."

"Any Open course is hard to catch up on if the leader shoots pars."

Of the 13 pars he carded, one especially stuck out in Watson's mind. "I didn't hit one good shot at the sixth. That was the key hole for men today as far as making an error and getting away with it."

If Medinah continues to dry out, it will again become the killer course it's always been touted as. And if that happens, few if any of the 60 some players who made the cut will get away with mistakes.

Most stars survive cut

MEDINAH — Such heavyweights as Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer, Johnny Miller and Gary Player survived the cut after the second round of the United States Open golf tournament here at Medinah Country Club Friday.

However, none of the above is leading. That distinction belongs to last year's Western Open champion, Tom Watson.

Following Watson's seven-under-par 135 comes Ben Crenshaw with 138 and first-day co-leader with Watson — Pat Fitzsimons — with 140.

The top 60 shooters and ties will continue to play today and Sunday, hoping to capture the prestigious Open championship. Those taking 150 strokes or more over the first two days will have to watch from behind the gallery ropes or on ABC-TV this weekend.

(Those planning to see the tournament in person today should head for Medinah early to avoid the traffic. Nearly 23,000 were in attendance yesterday. Play will get underway at 9 a.m.)

The chief chaser of Watson is Ben

Crenshaw. He toured the par 71 No. 3 course in 68 strokes thanks to his putter.

"I'm very much at home on the greens," said Crenshaw. "If I just start hitting the ball (off the tees), I'll be in there. 'I've been playing bad — having trouble driving the ball. I haven't gotten too much suntan the last few days. I've been in the trees.'"

Fitzsimons didn't complain about the huge oak trees that cover this posh playground of the pros. He meant of putting problems after some spectacular greens play first round.

"I did not putt as well today," he said. "I could have been seven or eight under at one time (if he'd had the touch)."

Fitzsimons, who ballooned to a 73 after an opening 67, found the water on the testing 220-yard par 3 17th. The double bogey cost him dearly.

Six strokes off the pace at 141 are Trevino, Jim Wiechers and Terry Dill. Trevino moved into contention with a U. S. Open caddies have frustrations but enjoy spotlight

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

MEDINAH—Several years from now, perhaps when the United States Open holds its 100th running, the caddies of the 75th edition will view their role in it with more of a sense of history than they possess now.

Sprawling here in the hot shade of the pro shop in the heavy green coveralls with a professional golfer's name tacked on the back, the caddies had sweated away any awe they might have felt towards the event.

"The pros are relatively cool guys," said Dave Fatima of Arlington Heights, who hauled Tom Watson's sticks as he shot to a share of the first round lead. "They treat us like equals in class. But aside from the pros there is a lot about this tournament that is really screwed up."

Scott Schultz of Hoffman Estates, Buddy Allin's caddy, piped up.

"I want to talk about these shoes they gave us," he said. "As soon as they got wet they shrink."

"I think they gave us the rejects," said Fritz Schuler of Arlington Heights, "because there are no sizes on the bottom."

"It's like walking around in a brand new pair of leather shoes."

"The reason they gave them away," Schultz concluded, "was because they couldn't sell them."

Then there were the green uniforms each caddy must wear.

"These monkey suits are horrible," Schuler said. "They should be all cotton but they're about 65 per cent polyester and I am just dying in here."

Fatima stretched the neck of his T-shirt out and twisted it until a thin stream of sweat came out.

"This is like a sponge."

Bill Garcia of Palatine, who caddied for Lee Trevino, pointed to a sign taped to the window of the pro shop that read, "No pin placements. You must get your own and stay outside the ropes."

"Can you believe that?" Garcia said. "How are we supposed to be able to get distances without going inside the ropes?"

"I was out at 5:30 in the morning getting distances," said Steve Kliff, a graduate of Elk Grove High School who will attend the University of Michigan on a Chick Evans scholarship next fall. "It's good to go around with other caddies so we can compare what we get."

"It's fine to compare and agree on distances," Fatima said, "but it doesn't do any good when they keep changing the pin placements after they say they are set."

With some of their frustrations vented, the conversation turned to golf and the optimism that accompanies even a first-round 76.

"My guy wasn't a stiff like I thought he was," said Kliff of Jack Ewing. "He didn't hit a single good drive all day but he was still scrambling for pars and putting real good."

"There's no way he's out of it," said Bob Fox of Arlington Heights, who carried for John Mahaffey as he fired a 73. "He's only two over par and he was having trouble with his putting. I think he'll be back."

Bob Metz, Tom Welskopf's caddy, was witness to one of the few bits of controversy that took place during the first round.

"Welskopf hit a shot into a tire rut on the eighth hole," he said. "The USGA guy wouldn't let him move it so he overshot the hole for a double bogey."

"By the end of the round I think he had just about decided to quit but he told me to put his clubs in the shack so maybe somebody talked him out of it."

"This course is changing every minute," Kliff said.

"It just keeps getting drier and drier. You'll notice that the players who went out early had the good rounds while later in the day the scores went up."

"I think Ewing can make the cut but I still think the man to beat is Jack Nicklaus."

"I caddied for him earlier in the week and I don't think anyone knows the course better than him. He knows distances down to the inch, the way the rough is set up, the way every putt is going to break."

"Nicklaus is tough," said Fatima. "But I like my guy's chances."

Everyone nodded, some more than others, thinking of the names on their backs.

Top gymnasts visit Maine West

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Gymnastics Editor

Illinois gymnastics enthusiasts, accustomed to the best, will be treated to an orgy of unheard of proportions at Maine West High School tonight, beginning at 7:30.

The finest talent in the United States has been invited to contend in the first National High School All-Around Gymnastics Tournament.

"We are in for one helluva show," said Sid Drain, the meet director. "The amount of gymnastics talent that is going to be in that gym Saturday night is stunning."

"The concept has gotten the attention of ABC," he continued. "They will have representatives here Saturday to see the meet and if things go as planned they will be back next year to film a segment for Wide World of Sports."

The $3 admission price will treat fans to the 12 best high school gymnasts in the country.

Rick Adams is a senior from Louisville. In addition to being an accomplished artist and B student, he has been the Kentucky all-around champion four straight years.

Hinsdale Central's 1975 Illinois state champs revolved around Breck Grigas, the Red Devils' all-around man.

Grigas was named All-American on the high bar, P-Bars, still rings and all-around.

Scott McBroom is like a character from a slightly unbelievable story. McBroom, a senior from Rochester, Pa., is a champion gymnast who won the state all-around title in 1975 to cap off a career that stretched throughout high school.

He is also a member of the French and photo clubs at his school, recently took the state real estate exam and was selected "Boy of the Month" by the Beaver County Lions Club.

Joe Stallone, another Pennsylvania, was a Turner all-around champion and selected to the 1974 high school All-American team.

Mario McContheon, oblivious to the fact that he is an outcast in the basketball-crazed city of New York, was the Big Apple's outstanding gymnast in five events and the state all-around champion.

Two weeks before the Ohio state tournament, Tom Haines of Akron was injured and figured he had to hang it up for the year. Two weeks later he was the state champion on side horse, high bar and P-Bars.

The Hersey High School state championship in 1974 and recent domination of area gymnastics was as much the responsibility of Kevin Muenz as anything else.

Muenz, who will attend Southern Illinois University next fall, won conference, district and sectional all-around titles and finished second in the state meet.

The pre-meet favorite in floor exercise will be Ron Gallimore of Tallahassee, Fla. Gallimore, a champion trampolinist, won the AAU floor exercise title in the Elite Division with a score of 9.6.

Niles East's Neal Sher is good enough at his sport, finishing second in the state in high bar, P-Bars and all-around, to teach gymnastics to children in the inner city.

Phil Gonzales is an accomplished fisherman as well as being the Southern California all-around champion. A junior from Van Nuys, Gonzales lists as one of his proudest achievements the landing of a 26-pound White Sea Bass.

The 1974 AAU Junior National All-Around champion was Tiger Taylor, of Valparaiso, Fla. Taylor is a senior and member of Who's Who and the discus champion of Okaloosa County.

Rounding out this dazzling dozen is Bart Conner, the man whom the other 11 will be gunning for.

The experience of winning the USGF all-around title in the Elite Nationals last week at Carbondale plus the fact that he set National High School all-around records in 1974 and 1975 should make Conner the favorite to win this gathering of champions.

The HERALD Brock puts bite on Cubbies, 8-3

Lou Brock drove home a pair of runs and scored three others Friday night, while righthander Bob Forsch aided his own cause with a leadoff triple to start a three-run third inning rally that helped the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Forsch led off the third with a hard liner which Jerry Morales chased into the right-field corner. Brock brought him home with a single to left.

Brock, who had a single and three doubles in five at-bats, stole second and scored when Cubs shortstop Don Kessinger bobbled Willie Davis' grounder for an error.

Reggie Smith then sent another liner to Morales and this time the ball bounced at his feet and rolled to the wall. Davis scored and Smith was credited with a triple although he was thrown out at home trying to stretch it into an inside-the-park homer.

Forsch gave up seven hits before giving way to Mike Garman with two out in the ninth. The loss went to Geoff Zahn, who was pulled for a pinch-hitter in the fifth.

St. Louis scored again in the fourth. Ted Simmons, who later added a solo homer in the eighth, led off with a double and scored on Ken Reitz' single.

Brock led off the fifth with a double and scored on Davis' double off the rightfield wall, giving St. Louis a 6-2 lead. His third double drove home the last St. Louis run in the eighth.

Twins ruin Hamilton's Sox debut

Steve Brye's first inning three-run homer backed up right-hander Ray Corbin's well-spaced 11-hit pitching Friday night in a 5-3 victory for the Minnesota Twins over the Chicago White Sox.

The victory ended a four-game Twins' losing streak. White Sox loser Dave Hamilton, making his first start for Chicago since coming from Oakland June 15, walked Dan Ford and Eric Soderholm in the first before Brye hit his fifth homer of the season into the left field stands.

The Twins added another run in the sixth after Hamilton walked John Briggs. Briggs took second on an infield out, moved to third when Glenn Borgmann beat out an infield hit and scored on Tom Kelly's sacrifice fly.

The final Twins' run came in the eighth on Eric Soderholm's double and Briggs' single.

The White Sox, unable to score after loading the bases in the first and second innings, finally got a run in the eighth on Ken Henderson's solo homer. They added two more in the ninth on Pat Kelly's sacrifice fly and Jorge Orta's run-scoring single.

Corbin (4-3) walked two and struck out nine as he got his sixth career win against one loss versus the Sox.

while the other two tolled for the South.

And it was Lion centerfielder Pat Rooney's towering three-run homer off "ex-teammate" Paul Kastner that gave the South a permanent 6-4 lead in the second inning on their way to an 8-4 victory. Kastner, a dazzling lefty for coach Pat Mahoney's ESCC champion St. Viator squad, struck out six in three innings but suffered the loss.

Kastner had given up another home run in the first, this one to South shortstop Mike Quade. Kastner's current "teammate" on the Arlington Heights legion team. Quade's blast came with Elk Grove's Glenn Stromberg on base with a walk.

Quade, of Prospect, played the whole game at short and contributed four hits and three RBIs to earn the outstanding-player designation. Last year's top performer, Jeff Brisson, was on hand to accept a trophy presented before the game.

Also on hand was Mrs. Hal Sprehe, the wife of the late Forest View baseball coach, who presented each all-star player with a certificate acknowledging selection to the prestigious team.

Following home-plate ceremonies, which included a surprise plaque presentation to Herald sports writer Keith Reinhard from the Mid-Suburban baseball coaches, the game settled down to a rousing slugfest. After Quade's two-run shot over the fence in left-center had given the South a lead, the North bats went to work in the bottom of the inning.

Steve Rymer singled off Rolling Meadows' starter Bob Schmidt and the Wheeling second baseman moved up on a walk to Arlington's Jerry DeSimone. Rymer had to wait near second on teammate Al Newman's long fly ball, which fell for a hit, but Rymer was out at the plate. Rooney to Stromberg to Steve Breitbell.

Then an error, an RBI double by Arlington's Dar Townsend, and a two-run single to right by Don Bianchi of Hersey gave the North a 4-2 edge.

Kastner fanned the first two batters in the second but an infield hit by Schmidt and another walk to Stromberg preceded Quade's RBI single and Rooney's home run to left.

Kastner gave way to Rob Hughes of Palatine, who pitched two shutout innings. Other North pitchers who hurled were Townsend, Dave Smither of Buffalo Grove, and Jim Recher of Fremd. Two unearned runs for the South in the eighth capped the scoring. Conant's Bill Anderson and Quade contributed hits to that uprising.

Schmidt settled down and got the North out in order in the second and the Mustang righthander got credit for the win. He was followed on the mound by Keith Mallan of Forest View, George Savage of Prospect, and Tim Halas of St. Viator, all of whom held the potent North bats in check the rest of the way.

The game was called after eight innings on account of darkness.

OUTSTANDING in his field at the second annual Hal Sprehe Memorial Game was Prospect shortstop Mike Quade, whose four hits, including a homer, and three RBIs led the south to an 8-4 win over the North Thursday, was selected as the outstanding player of the game. Quade earlier was honored as the Herald's Athlete of the Year.

Professional bass angler corrects common mistakes

"Talk tall," Cecil Walters Jr. whispered as he cast the blue and white Talk Tall plug with deadly accuracy at the base of the willow tree. "Do your stuff and talk tall."

Walters, a 52-year-old professional bass tournament angler from Millen, Ga., twirled the Kentucky-made lure like a dying shad and the water exploded. Seconds later a two and a half pound largemouth bass was flopping in the bottom of the boat.

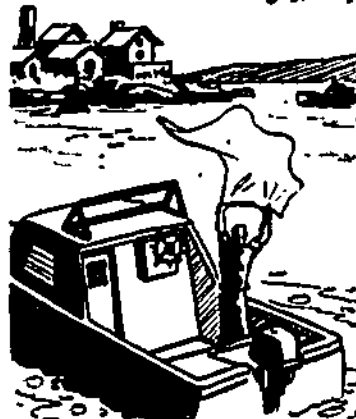

Five times in a row — once using a black plastic worm — Walters duplicated the scene before I could catch a fish. Walters and I were first-day partners in the two-day $50,000 Kentucky State Open Bass-fishing tournament held recently on Barkley Lake by the Florida-based American Bass Fishermen.

Kentucky anglers swept most of the tournament prize money from the field of 200 anglers from 18 states. The winner of the tournament — Owen Hyrum, 25, of Madisonville, Ky. — also used the Talk Tall lure, which is made of specially compressed Styrofoam by A. J. Edwards of Madisonville. Hyrum took home a check for $10,000 and also won a fully rigged bass boat valued at $4,000.

As I watched Walters boat the first five fish on me, it made me feel my experience as a bass fisherman was inadequate alongside a man who has stalked largemouth bass for 44 years.

Campsites wet, but usable

Heavy rains throughout the week have produced a mixed bag of reports from campsites in the northern section of the state.

Good conditions are reported at Sand Ridge State Forest, Morrison-Rockwood and Illinois Beach State Park. Still wet but usable are Starved Rock and the Kankakee River.

Average conditions but heavy usage is the word at Argyle Lake where movies and hayrack rides have been offered since May 31.

"I don't know what I'm doing wrong," I said as the action slowed temporarily.

With big prize money at stake and a chance to win points that could qualify a man for the $10,000 winner-take-all ABF playoffs in November, Walters would have been justified in ignoring me.

"When you cast your plug under the tree limbs work it, twitch it in a teasing manner for a few seconds before you start cranking it in," he said. "The bass can't resist it when it starts getting away."

"I'll also tell you what you're doing wrong with the worm," he said as we switched over from the Talk Tall lures and began fishing Mister Twister plastic worms — purple with fire tails. "You're pausing too long when you feel the pickup with the worm and you're dropping your rod tip before setting the hook."

"That technique is fine when you're fishing structure more than 10 feet deep because it gives the bass time to take up some of the slack. But we're fishing less than 10 feet of water and when that fish picks up the worm it doesn't take but a split second before he realizes it's phony. You either hit him now — regardless of where your rod is — or you don't have a fish."

"Also, your slip sinker is too heavy. Switch to a lighter sinker; it lets that Mister Twister slip down into the roots of the trees in such a manner the bass can't stand it."

I missed the next two fish trying to put Walters' advice to work, but then slammed the hooks to three fish in a row — two bass and a catfish — but neither bass would qualify as a 12-inch minimum tournament fish.

"You've got it now," Walters chuckled when I caught the catfish. "If you're setting the hooks on catfish you're doing everything right because they're harder to catch than anything."

Conditions are just 'duddy'

Heavy spring snows and rain in Canada have produced excellent water conditions that promise good duck nesting success, according to Ducks Unlimited. It may be a late nesting season though, since April was wet and cold and ducks delayed their arrival. But apparently they seem eager to nest.

How right he was. Shortly after that we began working the point of a small island. I cast the plastic worm into a tangle of vines, felt the faint tap-tap of a bass and reacted instantly. The water boiled with five pounds-plus of trouble. Later, my hands shook as I placed the fish in the live well.

Walters is a prime example of why professional bass-fishing tournaments, which are just starting to pay good money, have a chance of making it in the sports arena.

Few men could display finer skill or sportsmanship.

Admittedly, a deeply religious man, Walters regards black bass as a never-ending challenge. He believes professional tournaments, conducted properly with catch and release systems, do not harm bassfishing.

A determined angler, Walters searches his years of bass-fishing experience to come up with dozens of different tactics in order to get results when the fishing is tough.

Walters is the owner of Motor Bearings and Parts Co. in Millen and said he probably has the only auto parts store which stocks fishing equipment.

"My wife didn't want me to fish this tournament," he said, "but all I need is 31st place and I earn enough points to qualify me for the $10,000 playoffs."

Walters finished 21st in the tournament, giving him 11th place for the year in the ABF top 24 tournament standings and a berth in the November playoffs.

Balloon weekend was deflating

Outdoor Editor

Rain threw a bolt of lightning into the planned Midwest Balloon Championship in Crystal Lake last week and punctured what was to have been the biggest hot-air balloon contest ever held in the United States.

Over two inches of rain and unseasonably cold and windy weather abbreviated the event that drew 89 contestants, discouraging crowds that were expected to exceed 50,000.

Michigan residents dominated the shortened version of the festivities. Doug Mills sailed to first place in the competition to qualify for a trip to Switzerland and a ride in a hot-air balloon over the Alps.

Bob Berger of Hubertus, Wis. flew to second and Pete Krieg of Indianapolis, Ind. took third.

The first in-state finisher was fourth-place Al Desmond of Aurora while Jim Thornton of Grand Blanc, Mich. placed fifth.

Dave Medenna of Twin Lakes, Mich. captured sixth while Hawthorn Woods, Ill. native Bob Strand notched seventh.

Dave Schaffer of Dexter, Mich. floated to eighth, Bruce Comstock of Ann Arbor, Mich. breezed to ninth and Jeff Van Alstine, also of Ann Arbor, Mich. rounded out the top 10.

There was also competition for homemade balloons, but the drenching downpours erased the majority of activities planned for the gain three-day affair.

Officials of the event met to discuss the future of the Midwest Balloon Championship in addition to making plans to sell a surplus of soggy concessions and souvenirs.

Balloon field opens in area

In becoming one of the most popular hot-air balloon states in the country, Illinois will be home for another port easily accessible for area enthusiasts.

Wind Wizzard, Ltd. has announced the grand opening on July 5 of a field in Island Lake, just south of Rte. 176 on Roberts Rd.

The port will be open seven days a week with liftoffs at sunrise and two hours before sunset on weekdays and all day on weekends.

Jim Klick, balloon port manager, announced that the field will be available for training, repair, sales, rides, rental, storage, a launching site and clubhouse.

The cost per adult is $50 for a minimum of one hour flight time and $75 for two people going up together.

Twenty balloons are expected to be on hand for the grand opening July 5. For further information or reservations, call Jim Klick at 312-526-3755.

THIS SEVEN-STORY Budweiser hot-air balloon is nearly ready for liftoff and competition in the nation's largest race — A Gathering of Eagles.

A great sport — rally it is!

by KAREN BLECHA

"If you don't know Frank Daukas — well, maybe even if you do know him — you might think he is . . . uh . . . a little eccentric.

Why else would a grown man, 28 years old with a wife, child and an apartment in Hoffman Estates, drive from telephone booth to telephone booth at night; run across a beach with a specimen cup to fill it with Lake Michigan water; and get himself, his wife and his Opel Manta stuck in a 14-foot sand dune when his wife is five months pregnant and felt like she was about to have the baby right there?

"Once we were in a canoe and the instructions said to check out the brand of cows along the bank," Daukas says. "So I got out, ran up the bank and yelled at the farmer 'Sir, what brand are your cows?' He didn't hear so I yelled again, 'Sir, what brand are your cows?' Then he looked up and yelled back 'You don't brand cows!' Please, don't ask me how I felt about that one."

DAUKAS, PRESIDENT of the Park Ridge Sports Car Club, is a follower of an old but unsung sport — road rallying. He is one of at least 100 enthusiasts in the Northwest suburbs who grab a stopwatch or pocket calculator, jump into their cars on the weekends and head for the nearest rally to test their skills behind the wheel or in the navigator's seat.

Rallying is a sport that can take you from the scenic roads of McHenry County to a Lake Michigan beach to a telephone booth. It is a sport that doesn't always keep you on the road; some rallies have

INSTRUCTIONS for the gimmick rally

Car No. 18: Steady and on course

Press on!

Hunger, tired bones and sore bottoms don't count

If there is one thing you learn driving a road rally it is this: unless the driver gets sick or desperately needs to use the bathroom, press on regardless.

Hunger pains, tired bones and sore bottoms don't count. Getting lost is no excuse for giving up as long as you can somehow find your way back on course.

Fellow Herald staff writer Wandalyn Rice and I — a team that can barely play a civilized game of bridge at the same table — followed the "press on" motto at a recent rally. It paid off. We placed fourth out of 29 cars in our first rally.

The wind blew a cool breeze as drivers pulled into the parking lot at Harper College, Palatine, starting point of the event. The rally, open to novices willing to pay a $5 entry fee, was sponsored by the Park Ridge Sports Car Club and Des Plaines radio station WYEN.

Rallymaster John Romberger, vice president of the club and a six-year veteran of the road rally, welcomed drivers as he passed out general instructions. They outlined basic rules: SS means stop sign, if you get a traffic ticket you are disqualified and two panic envelopes could be opened if a team got hopelessly lost.

The rally had three legs: A TSD or time, speed and distance; a gimmick and a point to point. The club wanted to make sure beginners got a mixed taste of the sport.

The more points a team scored, the less chance of winning. Opening a panic envelope or missing a checkpoint would get you 900 points. Each second early or each second late at a checkpoint was worth one point. Each one-tenth of a mile off the official rally mileage on the last leg also cost one point.

It was first come, first in line. We were car No. 25, Wandalyn's new yellow Pacer sandwiched between a canary yellow Karmann Ghia and a brown Audi Sedan. The lineup was far from impressive — a blue truck, a dusty Muerick, a Volkswagen, Firebird, Triumph, Porsche and Chevy Malibu. Members of the club walked down the line of waiting drivers with the same consoling words: "Don't look so petrified!"

Navigators synchronized and resynchronized their watches as they waited, read and reread their instructions. The first car was off at 1 p.m., the rest each one minute apart. The first 10 miles of the rally was simply an odometer check — after that teams were running against the clock.

Our equipment was basic — paper and pencil, watch, seat of the pants. It felt good to be out on the open roads of McHenry County, driving the unknown and competing with it. "Left out of lot . . . right at SS . . . right after a sign reading in part Bridge." Teams also had to answer questions about landmarks along the way to be used in case of a tie.

"How many blue silos on your right?" 10. "What is the telephone number of Oak Hills?" Somebody said it was on a sign advertising a riding stable.

We were a confident team. The Karmann Ghia ahead of us went straight when we turned, but that didn't shake us. "Don't follow the guy in front of you," the veterans warned. "He doesn't know any more than you do."

The first leg was our best; it was downhill from there. We had 10 minutes at a house in McHenry County to rest, drink a lemonade and prepare for the gimmick. The instructions were a maze and we were the mice. Teams had to trace the correct route from start to finish. Then they had to drive it by counting intersections because the roads were unmarked.

If you were lost, you weren't alone. Rally cars — distinguished by lighted headlights and a number in the right corner of the windshield — passed each other once and passed each other again. The competition was friendly. Drivers waved as they recognized a car in the same event.

The gimmick leg was frustrating; we thought it was impossible. In a rally like this, drivers discover capabilities they didn't know they had. A honk, quick step on the gas and Wandalyn passed two rally cars at once. It was them or us.

The third leg should have been easy. Teams had to find the shortest distance to the Illinois Railway Museum in Union by making only right turns; they had to find their way to the Branded Steak House in Crystal Lake by making only left turns. But as Wandalyn pointed out, when the navigator has to turn the map upside down to try to figure out your location, you're in trouble.

Drivers pulled into the restaurant with tired faces, worn out after four hours of driving 140 miles. But the ones who made it considered themselves lucky. One team was still out — roaming the streets of Woodstock.

Maximum total points for the rally was 5700; the winner scored only 597. He was stunned. This was his fourth rally and the only one he had ever completed.

Car No. 25 scored 1132 points and we accepted our fourth place with smiles. "It was simple," we said. "No problems at all." I was sure it was my navigating skills. Wandalyn knew it was her driving. But some of the people at the table had other ideas. "We know," they said. "It must have been the Pacer."

Sounding sculpture dedication slated

Dedication of the large Bertoia "sounding sculpture" in the reflecting pool of the Standard Oil Plaza, Chicago, will take place Tuesday at 10:30 a.m.

American sculptor Harry Bertoia, who designed the piece, will be present to complete installation of the multi-unit work composed of repeating lines of tall, slender metal rods. From then on, Chicago's fabled wind will orchestrate continuous sounds as it sets the rods in motion and produces a variety of musical tones.

"Standard oil's sounding sculpture will be unlike any other major public art work in Chicago," said Richard Farrell, Standard vice president. "It is a sculpture that can be both seen and heard . . . one in which the unpredictable forces of nature ensure unlimited possibilities and combinations of sound and movement . . . and one which will offer an element of continuing discovery and fascination for the viewer," he continued.

THE SCULPTURE consists of 11 separate units. Each unit is composed of tall clusters of hard alloy copper rods welded to naval brass plates. They are mounted on 18-inch pedestals of black granite in a reflecting pool which has also been lined with 2-inch-thick slabs of the same polished granite. Honey locust trees and a 190-foot long waterfall flank the pool.

The sculpture's slender and rectangular composition offsets Standard's 80-story international headquarters, the second tallest building in Chicago and fourth tallest in the world.

An exhibition of sculpture by Harry Bertoia will open Thursday in the Lacy Armour Gallery of the Art Institute of Chicago and will continue through July 20. The exhibition is planned to celebrate the addition of another major public sculpture in Chicago, explained museum officials.

A SECOND exhibit of Bertoia's sculpture will take place at the Fairweather-Hardin Gallery, 101 E. Ontario, Tuesday through July 19.

All you need is a car and lots of enthusiasm had legs in canoes or on horseback. One rally included 18 holes of miniature golf.

People such as Daukas rally because they like to drive, like their cars and like to compete. One driver says he rallies to see some of the countryside he probably would not take the time to see otherwise. Some drivers just like to collect trophies and dash plaques.

"Rallies usually finish at a restaurant," Daukas says. "It gives you a chance to take your wife out to dinner once a month."

YOU DON'T need a sports car to rally. Anything with wheels — except maybe a bicycle — will do. People rally in Chevy Vegas, in Cadillacs, in pickup trucks, even in a bus. A 1939 Ford with a flat tire and no spare once tried to compete in a Park Ridge Sports Car Club rally. One team in a Concours Plaines Rallye Team event included an entrant on a motorcycle with sidecar.

"He didn't do too good," says Wayne Bell, Schaumburg resident and president of the Concours Club.

The object of a rally is simple: stay on course and be on time. The driver and navigator are given a set of instructions; it's up to them to figure them out.

They can be easy — "right at stop light, left at sign reading Bateman, right at the first opportunity after the big barn red" unless of course you miss the big, red barn.

They can also wrack your brain. Veterans advise: expect a headache. Most people have a hard enough time following a map without trying to translate "turn starboard, then steer a straight course for three knots" into automobile language.

INSTRUCTIONS LIKE that confuse and irritate, one reason why many rally teammates are not in the same family. Camillia Deuschle, Hanover Park resident and president of Four Forwards Sports Car Club, never rallies with her husband. "We like our marriage," she says.

John Romberger, vice president of the Park Ridge Sports Car Club, does rally with his wife but admits they fight.

"It's good for us. You learn to make up. I don't know how often my wife and I have gotten out of the car, thrown the clipboard at each other, walked around the car and decided to start over," he says.

Rallyists are all ages, from all occupations. "There is no such thing as a professional rallyist," says Sim Bason, who works at Western Electric Co., Rolling Meadows, and organized several employee rallies there. "We all have our 9-to-5 jobs and we all rally for fun, some a little harder than others."

THERE ARE two types of rallying, European and American. European-style is a race. American rallyists observe all speed limits.

"U.S. type rallying is a very forgiving sport," explains Romberger. "It's a parlor game by European standards. It is not dangerous. People who get involved in rallying have a better sense of the road. They are better drivers because rallying makes them aware."

National rallies test your endurance. Some run three nights — such as the famous Press on Regardless in northern Michigan — over the worst possible roads and rallyists are required to equip their cars with roll bars and wear crash helmets. Local rallies are milder. They usually take place in three or four hours in an afternoon, on a course of about 100 miles on open roads not far from the suburbs.

'People in rallying have better sense of the road'

THERE ARE four types of rallies. The two most popular are TSD (time, speed and distance) and gimmick rallies.

In a TSD, a team competes with the clock. Teams follow a set of basically straightforward instructions and must be at passage control stations and checkpoints at a specified time. Maintaining an average speed is important. Points — the fewer the points, the greater the chance of winning — are given for each fraction of a second early or late at a checkpoint as well for each fraction of a mile off course.

In a gimmick rally, deciphering the instructions is the object of the game. Timing does not count. Finding all the checkpoints and staying on course does.

"A true gimmick rally is purely word games," says Bill Wallace, administrator of Brand X Rallye Team which specializes in gimmick rallies. "They may be combined with a college-type rally where the instructions get cute."

IN "DON'T Let the Rabbit Know You're Coming," rallyists had to follow rabbit tracks on telephone poles to stay on course. Each rally team was given a copy of the Wall Street Journal in the "Billy Sol Estes Memorial Rally" and instructions were based on quotations from the stock market. In "Punched Out Three" teams were given computer cards that when put in the right order represented instructions. An addendum to the instructions was a listing in the Chicago telephone directory.

Rallies not so popular are point to point — finding the shortest distance between two locations such as telephone booths — and hare and hound. In hare and hound, the rallymaster drives ahead, leaving clues. In one hare and hound, for example, the rallymaster flashed a search light every five minutes and the first car to find him won the rally.

While some clubs combine gimmick and TSD rallies, some rallyists are purists. Bell, likes only TSD rallies; he thinks gimmick rallying is a totally different sport.

"I don't like them. In a gimmick if you can answer the questions and interpret the general instructions you can participate without ever leaving the kitchen table," he contends.

'Read your instructions until the paper wears away'

WALLACE, WHO lives in Mount Prospect, likes gimmick rallies because he thinks they are more challenging mentally. "Also you are not pressed for time and you can appreciate the rally," he says.

Rallies are usually sponsored by clubs. Certain auto clubs such as Volkswagen Club put on some rallies. The Park Ridge Sports Car Club sponsors 11 rallies a year, primarily for members and guests.

Seven clubs interested in promoting TSD rallying have formed the Tri-State Sports Car Conference with members from Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana. Competition is among clubs and individuals. The clubs must sponsor Tri-State events in which members can accumulate championship points.

Like the Tri-State conference, the Chicago Rally Club was formed to make sure similar rallies are not held on the same day. The club is composed of gimmick rally clubs and together they put on 44 rallies a year on Saturdays.

SOME CLUBS divide rallies into classes. Class A is for cars equipped with hundreds of dollars of sophisticated odometers and computer-like equipment. Class B is for the unequipped with teams using circular slide rules and pocket calculators. Some clubs have included a class C — teams that run by seat of the pants and paper and pencil.

Jeff Lurie, president of ULRO Rallye

Club (only its members know what it means) started out with paper and pencil but now has sophisticated equipment.

"To compete with paper and pencil you have to be a quick thinker. There are very few good navigators around that can do that without equipment," says Lurie, also of Mount Prospect. "It's a lot simpler with equipment. My scores on good legs have improved. The bad legs are the ones where you get off course. Machinery can't help you there."

As with any other sport, if you're going to start rallying, start small. Most rallies are open to the public. Entry fee is usually $5. Bissan advises:

"You don't have to know a lot about cars. Just go out for the first time and keep an open mind. Have a good time and don't try hard to compete. Once you learn a bit, then you can start competing."

DAUKAS, WHO likes rallying because of "the company, camaraderie and competition," says: "Read your instructions. Read them until the paper wears away in your hands. In rallies 75 per cent of the people cannot follow instructions."

He also advises drivers to follow speed limits; in some clubs rallyists are disqualified if they get a ticket.

"Stay on course," he says. "You can catch up time but once you're way off course, the ballgame is over. One important rule: don't follow anyone else. They don't know any more than you. Do what you think is right, not what the other guy does."

Rehabilitation of alcoholics topic of special

"Grant Me the Courage," a one-hour TV documentary that follows two alcoholics through the alcoholism rehabilitation center at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, will be broadcast at 9 p.m. Tuesday on WGN-TV.

The documentary, produced by Channel 9's news department, concerns Eleanor, a fortyish suburban housewife, and Al, a 33-year-old factory worker from downstate Illinois. Eleanor and Al were actual patients at the center who, with 14 others, agreed to be filmed during rehabilitation.

Forrest Respass of WGN-TV News, the producer and writer of "Grant Me the Courage," said, "Everything possible was done to make our filming unobtrusive but thorough. To gain background knowledge our crew worked with Lutheran General's staff and administrative people for eight weeks before any film was shot. To earn the acceptance of the alcoholism patients we spent an additional two weeks at the center full-time . . . in staff meetings, patient counseling sessions, medical briefings. We also attended A.A. and Al-Anon meetings."

Only then did the crew begin to film. According to Respass the equipment used for filming was chosen for its unobtrusiveness. "The camera was shoulder-mounted, a single 'shot-gun' microphone was used away from the center of action and no special television lighting was used at all. We all also agreed that if our filming appeared to hinder the rehabilitation of any patient, we'd quit then and there," he said.

The filming was done without staging, without rehearsals and without retakes.

"Nothing was faked . . . nothing was left out," Respass said. "Grant Me the Courage' records the progress of two initially sick and frightened human beings through three weeks of treatment. It shows them gaining better physical, emotional and spiritual health. They leave the program sober, alert and hoping for a better life than they've known for a long time."

The center, which is nationally recognized for its treatment program, has 74 beds and treats nearly 2,000 patients a year.

'Kojak' role close to Kevin's personality

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kevin Dobson, who plays detective Bobby Crocker in the "Kojak" series, was just another New York Irishman looking for work until he came to Hollywood.

He's been working steadily since invading California four years ago.

An attractive, energetic man, Dobson's characterization on the show is close to his own personality. What his role doesn't convey is Dobson's devotion to his wife, Susan, and their 5-month-old daughter, Miriah Shannon.

Not long after Miriah's birth, Kevin and family returned to New York where the infant was christened in the Little Ascension Church in Queens, the church where Susan was christened, took her first communion and was confirmed and married.

Dobson attends mass every Sunday.

LAST JANUARY, he bought his first home. It's a single-story California ranch-style house which he purchased on a GI loan. After a life in apartments, Kevin is ecstatic about owning his own land.

"It's a great feeling at night to come home and pull into the driveway," he says.

There's no swimming pool, and the garden needs work. But there is a pond shaded by big trees and it's full of large goldfish.

Susan and Kevin are refurbishing the 40-year-old house, stripping much of the woodwork which was painted over. Kevin has been busy steaming off old wallpaper.

The living room has a soaring cathedral beamed ceiling, and there's a cozy fireplace.

When the CBS series is in production Susan carries on the work. Kevin is at Universal studios 14 hours a day, five days a week. After seven years of marriage Susan still gets up to fix her husband's breakfast.

Kevin reciprocates by arising in the middle of the night when little Miriah yowls for milk.

HE ALSO changes diapers. Kevin spent hours playing with his only child during the show's hiatus earlier this year. He is required to be at the studio so often he treasures his moments with Miriah.

"Since the baby arrived I realized there was a future," he says. "I found a commitment. I can't live moment to moment anymore — the spontaneous life which was so important to me as an actor."

I am a great fan of Barry Newman of "Petrocelli" and I would like to have some information on him.

comer to TV audiences, he has won rave reviews for his starring roles in four movies, "The Lawyer," "Vanishing Point," "The Salzburg Connection" and "Fear Is The Key."

Barry graduated from Brandeis University with a degree in anthropology and then he decided to do graduate work at Columbia University in New York. While in the city, he visited Lee Strasberg's acting workshop and decided he would rather pursue a career in acting.

Barry's experience at the workshop resulted in various off-Broadway and Broadway productions, television commercials and dramatic TV guest appearances.

You can write to the star of NBC's "Petrocelli" in care of NBC Press Dept., National Broadcasting Company, 3000 West Alameda, Burbank, Calif., 91505.

Could you please tell me how long the TV series "Kolchak: The Night Stalker" will run this year? Please tell me where to write to Darren McGavin.

"Kolchak: The Night Stalker" unfortunately has not been renewed for the fall season. Send your protest letters or congratulations to Darren McGavin in care of Chasim Park-Citron Agency, 10889 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 1020, Los Angeles, Calif., 90024.

KEVIN DOBSON

Susan is an excellent cook. Now Kevin is trying his hand at that California tradition, the backyard barbecue.

A topflight baseball player in high school, Kevin keeps physically fit playing in the studio's softball league. Recently he has taken up tennis.

On Saturday mornings he plays touch football at a nearby public park with a group of actors and studio stagehands.

AS AN UNEMPLOYED New York actor, Kevin couldn't afford many clothes. He still favors denim. He bought a motorcycle when he came to California because it was less expensive than an automobile. Now the Dobsons are a two-car family.

Despite his long work day, Kevin rarely gets to bed before midnight. He is addicted to Johnny Carson's show.

The Dobsons have a few friends in to dinner now and then. They still are preoccupied with the new star of the family.

It's a new way of life for the transplanted New Yorkers — parenthood and California living. They are adjusting happily to both and planning for the future.

Equal exchanges of no importance? Look again . . .

The beginner may consider exchanging pieces one of the least problematic aspects of chess. If the quantities exchanged are of equal value, he neither loses nor gains. If they are of unequal value, he must merely ensure that the plus falls on his side — or so he reasons.

But he soon discovers that exchanges can be bad or good for other reasons.

An exchange can develop or hinder the final capturing pieces with decisive consequences. Exchanges can remove crucial pieces and together with other maneuvers transpose a game into a different kind of struggle.

Such strategical concerns often motivate long and subtle variations played in the games of the best players.

In our first position, Alekhine (white) has just played 1. KR-QB1, and after black's . . . KR-B1, exchanged rooks. He correctly felt that since he was a pawn ahead, he was right to diminish his opponent's counter chances by the elimination of a rook pair from the board.

Bothersome, though, is the question: why not 1 . . . R-NP for black? Doesn't he simply regain a pawn?

Diagram Two shows the answer. In that position, Alekhine would have continued (after R-NP) 2. KR-QN1!, R-R; 3. R-R, P-N3, with the fine move 4. R-QB1!. Thereupon Capablanca would not have been able to prevent a very effective entry of the rook on the seventh or eighth rank.

Several moves later there was another exchange possibility. Capablanca avoided the key position, shown in Diagram Three, by choosing an alternate variation. But if that position had occurred, Alekhine (by his own later testimony) would have continued after 1 . . . K-B4; to make the exchange 2. R-R, K-R.

Shelby Lyman on chess

The point is that the exchange would have freed his passed pawn. Alekhine claimed he then would have had a win after 3. B-N5, B-Q1; 4. P-R6!, P-P; 5. P-Q7, B-R4; 6. K-N2!. Was he right? (see Diagram Four). In any case, it is instructive how the "simple" exchange 2. R-R drastically would have changed and simplified the game into a creation of a new kind.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Find winning line of play

North and South have nine of the easiest tricks possible at notrump, but most pairs would land at four spades with or without West's club overcall.

There are the nine tricks available at spades, but 10 are necessary.

The easiest place to find that 10th trick is in hearts. Just let the suit break 3-3 and South's fourth heart will become a winner.

South can do a trifle better than that. He can guard against a 4-2 heart break provided the man with the four hearts also holds three or four spades.

This should be enough of a hint to you to find the winning line of play. If you haven't found it, here it is.

South takes the first club, plays one round of trumps, leads a heart and ducks in both hands. He can't afford two rounds of trumps — some mean opponent might lead a third. And he can't afford to play out the high hearts first — someone might get to overruff dummy.

After this start the contract wheels in. South gets in with a diamond, plays one more trump, continues with the ace and king of hearts and finally ruffs his last heart with dummy's last trump while poor East has to follow suit.

City fire, police unit votes to reinstate woman cop

by JOE FIANZ

The Des Plaines Board of Fire and Police Commissioners Friday night refused to dismiss rookie policewoman Kathleen L. Miller on charges of incompetency.

The three-member board ruled that the police department and city failed to provide adequate evidence to warrant the dismissal of Mrs. Miller.

A. C. Wilson, chairman of the fire and police board, said commissioners think the city proved only one of 10 counts against Mrs. Miller, adding that the one count was not serious enough to warrant her dismissal.

MRS. MILLER has been on suspension for 45 days, so she will be immediately reinstated and returned to duty. The fire and police board also has ruled that Mrs. Miller should be reimbursed by the city for salary lost during 15 days of the suspension.

After the fire and police board's decision was announced, Wilson said the police department lacks adequate standards for rating new police officers.

"We feel the department should develop actual standards for rating police officers, rather than relying on emotional standards," he said. "Someone might not think a person is a good police officer, but there should be specific standards developed so that it can be proven."

The fire and police board made the decision after reviewing a transcript of testimony from a hearing June 3.

AT THAT HEARING, Police Chief Arthur F. Hintz and several police department supervisors testified that Mrs. Miller had not performed satisfactorily during her probationary period with the department.

Mrs. Miller's attorney, Arthur Loevy, of the Combined Counties Police Assn., argued at the hearing that most of the charges were unfounded and that the remainder were not serious enough to justify the policewoman's dismissal from the force.

Among the charges filed against Mrs. Miller were that she disobeyed a department order, exhibited an incorrect mental attitude, did not properly investigate a possible burglary and exhibited a lack of knowledge of city streets.

The police department also charged Mrs. Miller with exhibiting poor driving techniques, failure to adequately handle an incident involving a mental patient and improper investigation of an auto accident.

THE ONLY CHARGE against Mrs. Miller that was proven, according to the fire and police board, was that while on patrol last November, she failed to notify the department of her position and availability to assist another policeman at the time of an "incident in progress" call.

Following the fire and police board's decision, Mrs. Miller said, "I'm glad it's over and am happy with the decision."

Mrs. Miller, a member of the police department since May, 1974, is one of three policewomen in the city.

$200,000 pact let for street work

Des Plaines officials have awarded construction contracts of more than $200,000 to clear the way for the start of the city's summer street improvement program.

The program will consist of repaving and resurfacing more than six miles of streets and sealing numerous others throughout the city. The work, which will be paid for with state motor fuel taxes, should begin in the next several weeks.

The city council has awarded a contract of about $101,000 to Cutler Repaving, Lawrence, Kan., for the repaving work. The first was the lowest of two bidders.

THE ASPHALT repaving, the most extensive of the improvements, will be done on 19 streets.

Ellis G. Perl, assistant city engineer, said the repaving consists of heating and scraping off part of the existing pavement and combining it with additional asphalt to form a new pavement.

Resurfacing of nine other streets will be done by the Johnson Paving Co., at a cost of about $69,000. The firm was the lowest of five bidders.

The resurfacing work consists of spreading liquid asphalt on the existing pavement and covering it with additional solid asphalt.

PERL SAID THE resurfacing and repaving will add to the structural strength of the streets and should make major repairs unnecessary for about 10 years.

"We'd like to think 10 years, but that can be affected by a lot of factors such as harsh winters and increased traffic," Perl said.

The sealing work, which is much less extensive than the repaving or re-

The city council has awarded a contract for about $37,300 to Ritschell's Inc., of Peoria, for the street sealing. The firm was the only bidder on the project.

IN ADDITION to the street repaving, resurfacing and sealing the city plans to seal coat a number of unimproved streets and replace about 8,000 feet of curbs and gutters throughout the city. The city council, however, has not yet awarded contracts for that work.

The annual street improvement program is in addition to the routine maintenance performed by work crews throughout the year. Perl said large chuckholes and other severe damage on streets not included in the program also will be repaired to eliminate safety hazards.

Perl said none of the city's streets have extensive damage, and some that are not improved this year will be taken care of next year.

WARREN AND IRENE Spaulding reminisce about their Mount Prospect neighborhood. A faster-paced suburban life has changed it in 25 years.

Suburbs no longer have 'pioneer spirit'

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

When Warren and Irene Spaulding moved to the Prospect Meadows subdivision in 1951, they and their neighbors were suburban pioneers.

Families borrowed each others' cars, went picnicking at Lake Zurich and shared the block's single telephone.

The Spauldings have watched Prospect Meadows change for 25 years. Neighbors have come and gone and gradually, something has been lost. The sense of community the Spauldings enjoyed has been pushed out by a faster-paced suburban life that provides little time for neighborliness.

THE COUPLE will move from their house on Oriole Lane next month, leaving Mount Prospect for retirement in Florida. They will miss the old times most.

The former GIs and their families who bought homes in the early years were "a very friendly neighborhood," said Mrs. Spaulding. All the women were housewives, and they gathered for poker parties and exercise classes after dropping off their husbands at the commuter station. There was a time when 15 or 16 children would play in the Spauldings' front yard.

Almost everything was community property then, Mrs. Spaulding said. "We thought nothing of loaning cars or making trips into town for a neighbor," she said. "And in those days, if someone's kid misbehaved we'd give him a good whack or two."

BUT THINGS have changed on Oriole Lane. Only three or four original owners still live in the 16 homes. Younger families move in and out of the area almost yearly.

The coffee klatches and neighborhood picnics at Lake Zurich have been replaced by "a growing majority" of working mothers, said Mrs. Spaulding, who has no children and has not worked since World War II. The children usually stay in their own yards, and if they misbehave now "it's strictly hands off," she said.

"The kids have really changed," she said. "Seems like all we hear nowadays are sirens from Prospect High School or hot rods at 3 a.m."

BOTH THE CHILDREN and their parents stay to themselves, Mrs. Spaulding said. "Block parties are passe," she added. "With both parents working, there's no time for chitchat. People just don't want to get involved."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

SCRAPING THE Friendship Park greenhouse structure became an aerial job Friday for Mike Retzer, Bill Myers and Sue DeSmidt,

pect Park District to save money in the renovation of the old greenhouse.

On, Guardsmen

The parking lot at Harper College rings with the blare of horns and the crack of drums as the Guardsmen of Schaumburg practice for competition. The 150-member drum and bugle corps is perfecting their routine for upcoming contests July 3 in Wheaton and July 4 in Hoffman Estates. Sponsored by the Schaumburg Chamber of Commerce and VFW Post 8880, Guardsmen corpsmen hail from 25 towns throughout the Chicago area.

25% say they're undecided

44% polled for football stadium

by KURT BAER
A statistical survey of 400 Arlington Heights residents indicates that almost half of the persons polled favor the idea of a professional football stadium at Arlington Park Race Track.
Of the persons asked, 44 per cent said they favored the 80,000-seat stadium being built in Arlington Heights, 30 per cent said they were opposed, and a significant 25 per cent said they were still undecided.
The survey, directed by Paddock Publication's market research department, was initiated before it was revealed that the village was being asked to issue tax-supported general obligation bonds to pay for the stadium, variously estimated to cost from $23 to $30 million.
THE SURVEY used accepted market research practices and is considered statistically valid for the village at the time.
Other conclusions of the public opinion survey show that:
• Increased traffic congestion is the number one problem foreseen in having the stadium built in Arlington Heights.
• Residents would prefer that Madison Square Garden Corp. and the Chicago Bears be co-owners of the stadium.
• The main benefit from the stadium would be an increased revenue base for the village.
• Approximately half of the residents said they would favor the village issuing tax-free municipal revenue bonds if they would not increase local taxes. These bonds would be paid for with stadium proceeds.

Interviews were conducted between May 15 and June 10 by telephone and in person. The random sample was drawn to include every geographic section of the village, homeowners and apartment residents, persons with listed and unlisted telephone numbers, and approximately equal numbers of males and females.
Village residents indicated a high awareness of the stadium proposal, with 98 per cent of those contacted saying they knew about the plan.
On the question of whether the village should issue tax-free revenue bonds for the stadium, 47 per cent of those asked said yes, 39 per cent answered no, and 14 per cent were unsure.
"The village will be stuck with a white elephant if the stadium fails," one female resident living on S. Mitchell Avenue said.
"I would approve the bonds only if Arlington Heights gets some of the proceeds," said a N. Beverly Ln. resident. "I mainly oppose the stadium because I live right in the area where traffic would be a worry."
A MONG POTENTIAL problems from the proposed stadium, 84 per cent of the residents said they expected increased traffic congestion.
Additional village service costs such as police traffic control was identified as a problem by 66 per cent of the respondents; environmental pollution, car and bus fumes by 50 per cent; increased noise by 49 per cent; and increased crime because of the influx of people by 47 per cent.

Among the possible advantages of the stadium, 62 per cent said it could increase the revenue base for the village; 51 per cent agreed on the convenience of going to the stadium to see Chicago Bears football games; 47 per cent thought it would stimulate retail business; 37 per cent agreed it would lead to further development in the area; and 36 per cent said it would mean greater awareness of the Village of Arlington Heights.
"As far as convenience goes, I think the city will benefit," said a male resident living on W. Rand Road.
"If it doesn't cost me anything — I'm for it," said another resident on S. Princeton Avenue.
THE ALTERNATIVE of a domed stadium instead of the open-air stadium that is proposed for Arlington Park does not appear to affect residents' thinking on the stadium idea.
Only 34 per cent of those asked said they would be more receptive to the Arlington Park stadium if it were enclosed, while 44 per cent said their thinking would not be influenced by a dome. One resident in five said he was uncertain.
"A dome would be great because it might attract other sports like hockey," said a female resident on Champlain Street.
"It should be a multi-purpose stadium... used for other things," a S. Mitchell Avenue resident said.
On the important question of financing, the alternative most preferred by residents is to have Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of Arlington Park, and the Chicago Bears Football Club be co-owners of the stadium. Thirty-eight per cent of those asked said they favored this arrangement.

VILLAGE FINANCING with tax free municipal revenue bonds was preferred by 28 per cent; financing by the Chicago Bears was favored by 12 per cent; Madison Square Garden financing and operating the stadium was preferred by 9 per cent; and 13 per cent said they were uncertain or had no opinion.
"If it has to be built, let Madison Square Garden do it," said one resident.
"If George Halas wants to build a stadium he should use his own money," said a N. Highland Avenue resident who has lived in the village more than 10 years. "Mayor Daley will never let the Bears out of Chicago," he added.
Long-time village residents generally expressed more opposition to the stadium than newcomers. Among persons living in Arlington Heights 10 years or more, 34 per cent said they did not favor the stadium idea. Among persons who have been in the village for three years or less, 29 per cent said they were opposed.
Residents who identified themselves as "avid sports fans" expressed above average receptiveness to the stadium. In this group, 52 per cent said they favored the stadium. The preference rate among nonsports fans was only 31 per cent.

Wheeling detective involved Cop accused of beating man in bar altercation

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
A 20-year-old Buffalo Grove man was severely beaten Thursday by an off-duty Wheeling policeman during a fight at the Clayton House Motel, The Herald has learned.
Police agencies investigating the incident have refused to identify the beating victim, who reportedly suffered head and groin injuries.
He reportedly told Illinois State police, who responded about 3:15 a.m. to a report of a fight, that he was beaten by Wheeling Det. Joseph E. Seul in the washroom of the cocktail lounge at the motel, 1090 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling Township.

SEUL REPORTEDLY grabbed the man and questioned his age. The man resisted and Seul, who was not in a police uniform, struck him, The Herald learned.
Seul, a resident of Buffalo Grove, was unavailable for comment Friday and is in Ohio attending the wedding of another Wheeling police officer.
Seul and Lt. Ted Bracke, head of Wheeling's detective bureau, were questioned later Thursday about the incident by Police Chief Peter Guttilla, it was learned.
Bracke and Seul were drinking at the bar of the Clayton House before the fight started.
"I DON'T KNOW what started it," Bracke said in a telephone interview Friday. "I wasn't in on the situation. I wasn't there when the altercation took place."
But, Bracke outlined Seul's version of the incident:
"He (Seul) was leaving the washroom when the two boys walked in and insulted him." "He asked for identification, and they wouldn't show it to him. He produced a badge, because he was in plain clothes."
"As I was leaving (the bar), I heard some noise in the washroom. One subject was on the floor. Seul was bent over him."
"I said, 'Hey, what's going on? Break it up.' Officer Seul said the boy struck him in the mouth," Bracke said.
"I PICKED THE boy up and put some water on his face. He said, 'The cop struck me.' He said the guy showed him a Wheeling police badge."

The fight was witnessed by a friend of the injured man. The friend called state police, who later questioned the man, Bracke and Seul at Dist. 3 State Police headquarters in Des Plaines.
Guttilla, who has refused comment, is investigating the incident and has received reports from Seul and Bracke. Guttilla abruptly "hung up" on a Herald reporter who called to question him on Friday about the fight.
The Herald learned that Guttilla called relatives of the injured man Thursday and offered to set up a meeting between Seul and the youth in an apparent effort to block filing of a criminal complaint against Seul.
ALTHOUGH STATE police confirmed that a squad car responded to a call for assistance at the Clayton House early Thursday, a copy of the police report was unavailable. Officials of State's Atty. Bernard Carey's staff, who are probing the incident, also were unavailable for comment.
Neither the youth nor Seul asked to file criminal charges Thursday at Dist. 3 headquarters, Bracke said.
Bracke met Seul in the Clayton House bar after attending the Wheeling Lions Club carnival. "I left about 11 p.m. and stopped to get a bite to eat. I was going home and then decided to stop and see the Clayton House show. I was by myself. Seul arrived about 45 minutes or an hour after I did. We had a drink, smoked a cigarette and talked."
Bracke denied that Seul was drunk before the fight started. "We both had been drinking. I don't know about the youth. But Seul was not drunk," Bracke said.
BRACKE SAID he "gave the boy a very quick check for injury. It's hard to say if he was hurt or not. He seemed a little incoherent, but I asked him if he was okay and he said 'yes.' He said he had a headache."
"It was up to the state police to check for injuries," Bracke said.
Bracke denied that he told state police the Clayton House is within Wheeling police jurisdiction. The hotel restaurant is in unincorporated Cook County.

The Clayton House was the scene of an incident involving Seul and sheriff's police who answered a report of a man with a gun at 7:10 a.m. Nov. 28, 1973. The man with the gun was Seul, but neither police agency would provide any details of the incident.
SEUL WAS ALSO convicted of disorderly conduct after a "bar ruckus" in Rockton, Ill., in 1972. Seul was charged by Rockton police after he became "abusive" in two bars and after "he was walking down the middle of the street causing cars to weave around him," Rockton police reports state.

13 'terminated' teachers get new contract offers

Thirteen River Trails Dist. 26 teachers, who received letters of termination, were rehired this week by the board of education for the 1975-76 school year.
The teachers are Gerry Darcy, Lynn Hughes, Naomi Ikoma, Jan Leonard, Fred Maker, Jan Olenicki, Robin Paul, Joy Sandlund, Florence Yaroeh, John Curtin, Mary Guthrie, Laura Krichewsky and Janet Marshall.
Michael Sheyker, board president, said the district sent out 26 letters of termination in early April because, according to Illinois school code, if a teacher is not notified within 60 days of the close of school that he or she will not be rehired, the district must rehire the teacher in September. Sheyker said these letters are sent out to many first-year and part-time teachers even in years when no teacher cutbacks are expected simply to make sure the district is covered if it needs to cut back staff.

Supt. John Fridlund said six other teachers may yet be rehired, and the remaining seven will not be returning to the district next year. Fridlund said most of the teachers being rehired will return to the positions they had this year.
Board members voted to reduce staff by six full-time teachers and one part-time teacher for 1975-76.

Wheeling cop accused of beating man in bar fight

Injury to Buffalo Grove resident sparks inquiry

Wheeling officials are investigating an incident involving an off-duty village policeman and a 20-year-old Buffalo Grove man to determine if disciplinary action should be taken against the policeman.

Village Mgr. George Passolt Friday said he has directed Police Chief Peter Gutilla to investigate the matter. "Right now we only have one side of the story," Passolt said.

The alleged incident involved Patrolman Joseph Seul and an as yet unidentified Buffalo Grove man at the Clayton House Motel, Wheeling Township.

ACCORDING TO unofficial accounts of the incident, Seul severely beat the man during a fight early Thursday in the washroom of the Clayton House. Seul reportedly grabbed the man and questioned his age. When the man resisted, Seul allegedly struck him.

Trustees contacted Friday said they only knew sketchy information about the incident and did not care to comment on the matter until results of the investigation are known.

"We'll have to wait and see what comes of any charges because it's too soon to prejudge the case," Trustee Otis Hedlund said. "It appears to have serious ramifications and it seems to be of grave enough importance that more than just inter-departmental discipline is needed. It's unfortunate because Wheeling's image once again takes it on the chin," Hedlund added.

Trustee John Cole said he has heard nothing official about the incident. "I have not talked to anyone about it and all I've heard are rumors," Cole said.

TRUSTEE GILBERT Monoson said he was informed of the incident late Thursday by Passolt but he did not wish to comment on the matter.

"I would prefer to withhold any comments until I know the whole story," Monoson said. "I think it's very unfair to make statements about officers or the chief without all the facts."

Trustees Charles Kerr, Donald Jackson and William Hein could not be reached for comment.

Police to block Strong St. building

by LUISA GINETTI

Police surveillance of the W. Strong Street area has been ordered through Monday to prevent construction on 47 lots which have been the subject of controversy between the developer and the Wheeling Village Board.

The action was requested Friday by Trustee Gilbert Monoson following reports that construction crews were at the scene of one lot where work has begun.

The lots are owned by the family of Douglas Cargill, former zoning board chairman, through secret land trusts. Victor Smigel is the developer of the lots, where six-unit apartments buildings have been proposed.

Building Director Walter Repholtz said work going on at the lot at W. Strong and Seventh streets was only to remove weeds which have accumulated in the area. Repholtz said the leveling and grading was allowed to continue so weeds could be removed for health reasons.

CONSTRUCTION on the lots has been banned because of recent village board action declaring the multi-family zoning on the property expired. Building permits which were issued for six of the 47 lots have been ordered held in abeyance thus making it illegal for the developer to do any further construction.

Smigel and Cargill have said they plan to go ahead with construction despite the village board's action. The developer and the property owner said they believe the board did not have the authority to declare the zoning expired because a court ruling had declared the zoning valid.

Zoning for the property was changed in 1972 from single-family to multi-family. Homeowners in the area initiated a suit at the time of the zoning change seeking to declare it illegal.

The Illinois Appellate Court three months ago upheld a lower court ruling declaring the zoning valid.

The board's action declaring the zoning expired was based on a village ordinance which states that zoning on property shall expire in two years if (Continued on Page 5)

BULLDOZER SITS READY to clear land on a vacant lot at W. Strong and Seventh streets. Officials from the Wheeling Building Dept. went to the scene to stop construction on the Families borrowed each others' cars, went picnicking at Lake Zurich and shared the block's single telephone.

The Spauldings have watched Prospect Meadows change for 25 years. Neighbors have come and gone and gradually, something has been lost. The sense of community the Spauldings enjoyed has been pushed out by a faster-paced suburban life that provides little time for neighborliness.

THE COUPLE will move from their house on Oriole Lane next month, leaving Mount Prospect for retirement in Florida. They will miss the old times most.

The former GIs and their families who bought homes in the early years were "a very friendly neighborhood," said Mrs. Spaulding. All the women were housewives, and they gathered for poker parties and exercise classes after dropping off their husbands at the commuter station. There was a time when 15 or 16 children would play in the Spauldings' front yard.

Almost everything was community property then, Mrs. Spaulding said. "We thought nothing of loaning cars or making trips into town for a neighbor," she said. "And in those days, if someone's kid misbehaved we'd give him a good whack or two."

BUT THINGS have changed on Oriole Lane. Only three or four original owners still live in the 16 homes. Younger families move in and out of the area almost yearly.

The coffee klatches and neighborhood picnics at Lake Zurich have been replaced by "a growing majority" of working mothers, said Mrs. Spaulding, who has no children and has not worked since World War II. The children usually stay in their own yards, and if they misbehave now "it's strictly hands off," she said.

"The kids have really changed," she said. "Seems like all we hear nowadays are sirens from Prospect High School or hot rods at 3 a.m."

BOTH THE CHILDREN and their parents stay to themselves, Mrs. Spaulding said. "Block parties are passe," she added. "With both parents working, there's no time for chitchat. People just don't want to get involved."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

25% say they're undecided

44% polled for football stadium

by KURT BAER

A statistical survey of 400 Arlington Heights residents indicates that almost half of the persons polled favor the idea of a professional football stadium at Arlington Park Race Track.

Of the persons asked, 44 per cent said they favored the 80,000-seat stadium being built in Arlington Heights, 30 per cent said they were opposed, and a significant 25 per cent said they were still undecided.

The survey, directed by Paddock Publication's market research department, was initiated before it was revealed that the village was being asked to issue tax-supported general obligation bonds to pay for the stadium, variously estimated to cost from $23 to $30 million.

Other conclusions of the public opinion survey show that:

- Increased traffic congestion is the number one problem foreseen in having the stadium built in Arlington Heights.
- Residents would prefer that Madison Square Garden Corp. and the Chicago Bears were co-owners of the stadium.
- The main benefit from the stadium would be an increased revenue base for the village.
- Approximately half of the residents said they would favor the village issuing tax-free municipal revenue bonds if they would not increase local taxes. These bonds would be paid for with stadium proceeds.

Interviews were conducted between May 15 and June 10 by telephone and in person. The random sample was drawn to include every geographic section of the village, homeowners and apartment residents, persons with listed and unlisted telephone numbers, and approximately equal numbers of males and females.

Village residents indicated a high awareness of the stadium proposal, with 98 per cent of those contacted saying they knew about the plan.

On the question of whether the village should issue tax-free revenue bonds for the stadium, 47 per cent of those asked said yes, 39 per cent answered no, and 14 per cent were unsure.

"The village will be stuck with a white elephant if the stadium fails," one female resident living on S. Mitchell Avenue said.

"I would approve the bonds only if Arlington Heights gets some of the proceeds," said a N. Beverly Ln. resident. "I mainly oppose the stadium because I live right in the area where traffic would be a worry."

A MONG POTENTIAL problems from the proposed stadium, 84 per cent of the residents said they expected increased traffic congestion.

Additional village service costs such as police traffic control was identified as a problem by 66 per cent of the respondents; environmental pollution, car and bus fumes by 50 per cent; increased noise by 49 per cent; and increased crime because of the influx of people by 47 per cent.

Among the possible advantages of the stadium, 62 per cent said it could increase the revenue base for the village; 51 per cent agreed on the convenience of going to the stadium to see Chicago Bears football games; 47 per cent thought it would stimulate retail business; 37 per cent agreed it would lead to further development in the area; and 35 per cent said it would mean greater awareness of the Village of Arlington Heights.

"As far as convenience goes, I think the city will benefit," said a male resident living on W. Rand Road. "If it doesn't cost me anything — I'm for it," said another resident on S. Princeton Avenue.

THE ALTERNATIVE of a domed stadium instead of the open-air stadium that is proposed for Arlington Park does not appear to affect residents' thinking on the stadium idea.

Only 34 per cent of those asked said they would be more receptive to the Arlington Park stadium if it were enclosed, while 44 per cent said their thinking would not be influenced by a dome. One resident in five said he was uncertain.

"A dome would be great because it might attract other sports like hockey," said a female resident on Champlain Street.

"It should be a multi-purpose stadium... used for other things," a S. Mitchell Avenue resident said. On the important question of financing, the alternative most preferred by staff, who are probing the incident, also were unavailable for comment.

Neither the youth nor Seul asked to file criminal charges Thursday at Dist. 3 headquarters, Bracke said.

Bracke met Seul in the Clayton House bar after attending the Wheeling Lions Club carnival. "I left about 11 p.m. and stopped to get a bite to eat. I was going home and then decided to stop and see the Clayton House show. I was by myself. Seul arrived about 45 minutes or an hour after I did. We had a drink, smoked a cigarette and talked."

Bracke denied that Seul was drunk before the fight started. "We both had been drinking. I don't know about the youth. But Seul was not drunk," Bracke said.

BRACKE SAID he "gave the boy a very quick check for injury. It's hard to say if he was hurt or not. He seemed a little incoherent, but I asked him if he was okay and he said 'yes.' He said he had a headache."

"It was up to the state police to check for injuries," Bracke said.

Bracke denied that he told state police the Clayton House is within Wheeling police jurisdiction. The hotel restaurant is in unincorporated Cook County.

The Clayton House was the scene of an incident involving Seul and sheriff's police who answered a report of a man with a gun at 7:10 a.m. Nov. 28, 1973. The man with the gun was Seul, but neither police agency would provide any details of the incident.

SEUL WAS ALSO convicted of disorderly conduct after a "bar ruckus" in Rockton, Ill., in 1972. Seul was charged by Rockton police after he became "abusive" in two bars and after "he was walking down the middle of the street causing cars to weave around him," Rockton police reports state.

substantial construction on the land has not begun.

SMIGEL AND Cargill contend the board's action was inappropriate because the official clock on the zoning did not begin until the court action was completed. The board said the two-year clock was in effect since Smigel could have begun construction during the time the matter was in court.

Monoson said Friday he was very pleased with the swift action taken by Repholtz and Village Mgr. George Passolt when reports were received that construction on the lots was taking place.

"There was cooperation between the departments and it was handled in a very prompt and professional manner," Monoson said.

Passolt said the village would move to stop construction on the lots in accordance with the village board's action. Repholtz said there are no valid building permits out for the lots and construction would be considered illegal.

Village Atty. Paul Hamer said Friday he has met with Richard Kruse, attorney representing Smigel and Cargill, and told him the board would like to know his clients' wishes in writing.

A request for an extension of zoning may be sought but Hamer said Kruse did not indicate what action he plans to take.

More than 400 Prospect Heights Little Leaguers journeyed to Wrigley Field Thursday for Greg Luzinski Day.

Luzinski, left fielder for the Philadelphia Phillies, is from Prospect Heights and a former Little League member. A similar day for Luzinski was held two years ago.

Luzinski responded to his fans Thursday with a double and two singles in five official at bats. He scored twice, including once during the Phillies winning rally in the 14th inning. The Chicago Cubs lost the game 6-3.

Beautification panel seeks gifts for village hall chimes

Donations are being sought by the Wheeling Beautification Committee to purchase chimes to be installed at the village hall as part of the group's Bicentennial project.

The committee has set a goal of $10,000 for the project which will cover the cost of purchase and installation of the chimes as well as provide for the purchase of tapes to use with the chimes.

The committee is selling Bicentennial pins for $1 as part of its fund-raising drive, but in order to reach its goal the committee also is seeking larger contributions.

The carillon chimes will include four speakers to be placed on the roof of the village hall, committee member Walter Stryzysk said. The chimes will be tied into a national emergency warning system, Stryzysk added.

THE COMMITTEE hopes to have the chimes installed by July 4, 1976, in time for the celebration of the nation's 200th birthday.

Stryzysk said the committee hopes to play the chimes on the hour with different tapes played during different times of the year. For example, he said during Christmas, tapes with carols will be played. He added that the committee hopes to get patriotic tapes to play during the Bicentennial celebration.

The exact times the chimes will be run will be determined after they are installed, Stryzysk said, because the committee does not want the chimes to disturb residents in the area.

Donations should be sent to the beautification committee in care of the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

The Bicentennial "Spirit of '76" lapel pins are available at the village hall.

Area policeman accused of beating man in bar fight

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

A 20-year-old Buffalo Grove man was severely beaten Thursday by an off-duty Wheeling policeman during a fight at the Clayton House Motel. The Herald has learned.

Police agencies investigating the incident have refused to identify the beating victim, who reportedly suffered head and groin injuries.

He reportedly told Illinois State police, who responded about 3:15 a.m. to a report of a fight, that he was beaten by Wheeling Det. Joseph E. Seul in the washroom of the cocktail lounge at the motel, 1050 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling Township.

SEUL, REPORTEDLY grabbed the man and questioned his age. The man resisted and Seul, who was not in a police uniform, struck him. The Herald learned.

Seul, a resident of Buffalo Grove, was unavailable for comment Friday and is in Ohio attending the wedding of another Wheeling police officer.

Seul and Lt. Ted Bracke, head of Wheeling's detective bureau, were questioned later Thursday about the incident by Police Chief Peter Guttilla. It was learned.

Bracke and Seul were drinking at the bar of the Clayton House before the fight started.

"I DON'T KNOW what started it," Bracke said in a telephone interview Friday. "I wasn't in on the situation. I wasn't there when the altercation took place."

But, Bracke outlined Seul's version of the incident:

"He (Seul) was leaving the washroom when the two boys walked in and insulted him." "He asked for identification, and they wouldn't show it to him. He produced a badge, because he was in plain clothes."

"As I was leaving (the bar), I heard some noise in the washroom. One subject was on the floor. Seul was bent over him.

"I said, 'Hey, what's going on? Break it up.' Officer Seul said the boy struck him in the mouth," Bracke said.

"I PICKED THE boy up and put some water on his face. He said, 'The cop struck me.' He said the guy showed him a Wheeling police badge."

The fight was witnessed by a friend of the injured man. The friend called state police, who later questioned the man, Bracke and Seul at Dist. 3 State Police headquarters in Des Plaines.

Guttilla, who has refused comment, is investigating the incident and has received reports from Seul and Bracke. Guttilla abruptly "hung up" on a Herald reporter who called to question him on Friday about the fight.

The Herald learned that Guttilla called relatives of the injured man Thursday and offered to set up a meeting between Seul and the youth in an apparent effort to block filing of a criminal complaint against Seul.

ALTHOUGH STATE police confirmed that a squad car responded to a call for assistance at the Clayton House early Thursday, a copy of the police report was unavailable. Officials of State's Atty. Bernard Carey's staff, who are probing the incident, also were unavailable for comment.

Neither the youth nor Seul asked to file criminal charges Thursday at Dist. 3 headquarters, Bracke said.

Bracke met Seul in the Clayton House bar after attending the Wheeling Lions Club carnival. "I left about 11 p.m. and stopped to get a bite to eat. I was going home and then decided to stop and see the Clayton House show. I was by myself. Seul arrived about 45 minutes or an hour after I did. We had a drink, smoked a cigaret and talked."

Injury to Buffalo Grove resident sparks inquiry

Wheeling officials are investigating an incident involving an off-duty village policeman and a 20-year-old Buffalo Grove man to determine if disciplinary action should be taken against the policeman.

Village Mgr. George Passolt Friday said he has directed Police Chief Peter Guttilla to investigate the matter. "Right now we only have one side of the story," Passolt said.

The alleged incident involved Patrolman Joseph Seul and an as yet unidentified Buffalo Grove man at the Clayton House Motel, Wheeling Township.

ACCORDING TO unofficial accounts of the incident, Seul severely beat the man during a fight early Thursday in the washroom of the Clayton House. Seul reportedly grabbed the man and questioned his age. When the man resisted, Seul allegedly struck him.

Trustees contacted Friday said they only knew sketchy information about the incident and did not care to comment on the matter until results of the investigation are known.

"We'll have to wait and see what comes of any charges because it's too soon to prejudge the case," Trustee Otis Hedlund said. "It appears to have serious ramifications and it seems to be of grave enough importance that more than just inter-departmental discipline is needed. It's unfortunate because Wheeling's image once again takes it on the chin," Hedlund added.

Trustee John Cole said he has heard nothing official about the incident. "I have not talked to anyone about it and all I've heard are rumors," Cole said.

TRUSTEE GILBERT Monoson said he was informed of the incident late Thursday by Passolt but he did not wish to comment on the matter.

"I would prefer to withhold any comments until I know the whole story," Monoson said. "I think it's very unfair to make statements about officers or the chief without all the facts."

Trustees Charles Kerr, Donald Jackson and William Hein could not be reached for comment.

him if he was okay and he said 'yes.' He said he had a headache."

"It was up to the state police to check for injuries," Bracke said.

Bracke denied that he told state police the Clayton House is within Wheeling police jurisdiction. The hotel

Parks, village officials plan workshop parley

Buffalo Grove Park District officials will meet with the village board Monday to review various matters in an informal workshop session.

The workshop will follow a board meeting at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Joseph Settani, park board president, said they will discuss the park district's 10-point program urging the completion of village parks and promoting park usage by residents.

The program was drafted by Park Comr. William J. Kiddle.

PARK OFFICIALS plan to review the village resolution concerning donations to village, parks and schools by developers. Patterned after the ordinance in Naperville, Buffalo Grove requires 5.5 acres donation per 1,000 population or an equivalent in recreational facilities, Settani said.

Specific land donation agreements will be reviewed including a one-acre site on Penny Lane, adjacent to Twin Groves School.

Park officials also want to clarify agreements made with The Crossings development by the Richards Group, who will donate farm-like acreage, complete with barn, Settani said.

Both village and park officials will work together on a possible paving project along Buffalo Grove Road

WARREN AND IRENE Spaulding reminisce about their Mount Prospect neighborhood. A faster-paced suburban life has changed it in 25 years.

Suburbs no longer have 'pioneer spirit'

by LAURA SCHIMLBACH

When Warren and Irene Spaulding moved to the Prospect Meadows subdivision in 1951, they and their neighbors were suburban pioneers.

Families borrowed each others' cars, went picnicking at Lake Zurich and shared the block's single telephone.

The Spauldings have watched Prospect Meadows change for 25 years. Neighbors have come and gone and gradually, something has been lost. The sense of community the Spauldings enjoyed has been pushed out by a faster-paced suburban life that provides little time for neighborliness.

THE COUPLE will move from their house on Oriole Lane next month, leaving Mount Prospect for retirement in Florida. They will miss the old times most.

All the women were housewives, and they gathered for poker parties and exercise classes after dropping off their husbands at the commuter station. There was a time when 15 or 16 children would play in the Spauldings' front yard.

Almost everything was community property then, Mrs. Spaulding said. "We thought nothing of loaning cars or making trips into town for a neighbor," she said. "And in those days, if someone's kid misbehaved we'd give him a good whack or two."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

EVEN SMOKY, the fire-fighting Dalmatian at the Buffalo Grove Fire Dept., gets checked for a dog license by police cadet Bob Heer and firefighter Al Bernardi. Buffalo Grove police are developing a new system that checks the licenses of all dogs owned by village residents. Dog owners can license their pets for $3 or face a fine of $15.

THE SURVEY used accepted market research practices and is considered statistically valid for the village at the time.

Other conclusions of the public opinion survey show that:

- Increased traffic congestion is the number one problem foreseen in having the stadium built in Arlington Heights.
- Residents would prefer that Madison Square Garden Corp. and the Chicago Bears be co-owners of the stadium.

On the important question of financing, the alternative most preferred by residents is to have Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of Arlington Park, and the Chicago Bears Football Club be co-owners of the stadium. Thirty-eight per cent of those asked said they favored this arrangement.

VILLAGE FINANCING with tax free municipal revenue bonds was preferred by 28 per cent; financing by the Chicago Bears was favored by 12 per cent; Madison Square Garden financing and operating the stadium was preferred by 9 per cent; and 13 per cent said they were uncertain or had no opinion.

"If it has to be built, let Madison Square Garden do it," said one resident.

"If George Halas wants to build a stadium he should use his own money," said a N. Highland Avenue resident who has lived in the village more than 10 years. "Mayor Daley will never let the Bears out of Chicago," he added.

Long-time village residents generally expressed more opposition to the stadium than newcomers. Among persons living in Arlington Heights 10 years or more, 34 per cent said they did not favor the stadium idea. Among persons who have been in the village for three years or less, 29 per cent said they were opposed.

Residents who identified themselves as "avid sports fans" expressed above average receptiveness to the stadium. In this group, 52 per cent said they favored the stadium. The preference rate among nonsports fans was only 31 per cent.

School board unaware why Bedard quit as president

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 has a board of education without a leader.

In a surprise move Thursday, Edward Bedard resigned as president of the board, a position he was appointed to by a unanimous vote of the board two months ago. Bedard's fellow board members Friday said they were shocked by the resignation and could find no reason for it. They said Bedard has been an excellent leader.

Bedard Friday said a good president must "represent the board, its decisions and the process of arriving at its decisions." He said "recent events" have put him in a position where he could no longer serve as the board's representative.

BEDARD DECLINED to comment on those events but said they have nothing to do with the board's decision Thursday to renovate Blackhawk School, are not related to his attempt to reorganize the board in recent weeks and are not connected to his business interests as a manufacturing representative.

Edward Bedard

"The basic conflict I have is that I don't believe they're acting in the matter in which I as board president should represent them," Bedard said. He would not reveal the actions he objects to but said the matter would become clear by the end of his term on the board next April.

Bedard did say the neutrality expected of the leader of the board in presiding over meetings is part of his decision to resign. In the past, Bedard has been an outspoken board member and has often played the role of the devil's advocate in discussions of board matters. As president, Bedard said he is often unable to step into the role.

The Dist. 54 board made several unsuccessful attempts to name a new leader Thursday. Five board members were nominated for president but the board members either declined the nomination or did not win a majority of votes of the seven-member board.

BOARD MEMBERS Gordon Thoren, Esther Karras and Bedard were nominated after the resignation but declined the post. Brenda Pulla and Margaret Pageler also were nominated but did not receive a majority vote.

Board Secy. Gordon Thoren will serve as the board's liaison to district officials until the board can elect a president. The board's next regular meeting is July 1.

Board member Sherry Reynolds said she was "totally surprised" by Bedard's resignation. "I thought he was a very good leader. I thought he provided direction and leadership when it was needed," she said. She said she does not know the reason for the resignation. "My feeling is that the board obviously needs to reorganize and redirect its effort in a more unified direction. I don't see any crisis."

"I think Mr. Bedard is a very fine man and an asset to the board and to the district," said board member Dr. Edgar Feldman. "Obviously it has to do with some inner dissension in his own mind," he said in commenting on the resignation.

Board member Margaret Pageler said she was "disappointed" by the resignation because she was pleased with Bedard's leadership. "He did an excellent job."

WARREN AND IRENE Spaulding reminisce about their Mount Prospect neighborhood. A faster-paced suburban life has changed it in 25 years.

Flash floods hit section of Schaumburg

Merchants and residents in south-central Schaumburg, near Weatherfield Way and Cedarcrest Drive, reported flash flooding Friday from a sudden afternoon storm.

Nancy Becker, owner of Tiny Tots Toyery, 11 W. Weatherway Plaza, said her store flooded within 15 minutes after the rain began at about 1:15 p.m. Mrs. Becker said this is the second time the building has flooded this year, though merchandise displayed on high racks was not damaged.

Other Weatherway Plaza stores reporting water damage included Central Radio and TV, The Glass Garden, Keller-Schaumburg Insurance and Village Hardware.

Mrs. Walter M. Arnett, 416 Weatherfield Way, said water rose above a fire hydrant near her house. "Thank heavens we didn't have a problem, because we finally sealed our basement windows after having been flooded almost every time it rains," she said.

THIS WEEK'S heavy rains created problems for some area residents, but for children it also created a lot of fun. These two children waded through a newly created lake in Locust Park in Hoffman Estates.

'Conservative spending' needed

The Village of Hoffman Estates will have to maintain a "conservative" spending policy in the coming year, despite a better economic outlook, according to a report issued by the village finance director.

In a report released to village officials this week, Finance Director Keith Wendland said the village "managed to weather a period of extreme financial uncertainty" last year but he cautioned that the current budget year "will be one of conservatism on the part of expenditures until a more normal pattern develops within our economy."

The report shows the village fell 13 per cent short of its expected income last year in several major revenue categories, with the biggest drops coming in building-related income.

ANTICIPATED revenue in building permit fees, a significant money-making category, was off by 59 per cent, the report shows. Related income sources such as connection fees, meter sales and engineering fees were off by 58 per cent, 80 per cent and 26 per cent respectively.

"There are a lot of things tied to building permits," Wendland said Thursday. He said the financial outlook for the coming year will hinge on how the building industry recovers from last year's slump.

"A lot will depend on those building permits," Wendland said. "We're going to be watching it very closely."

He added, however, that inflation may still force the village to find new sources of revenue, likely higher taxes, to maintain or expand services.

"I would say yes, just judging from the way inflation has affected us," Wendland said on the need for more revenue. "It doesn't look like there's any other way."

VILLAGE PRES. Virginia Hdyter already has predicted a real estate tax increase for next year. Several other village officials have said a tax increase may be unavoidable because of rising expense costs.

Village officials still say the new 5 per cent utility tax, instituted this year to pay for a debt in the fire department, will be eliminated this year if the $360,000 needed for the debt is collected.

A most half that sum, about $149,000, has been collected in the first four scheduled payments from the utility companies, Wendland said.

He said the utility tax issue is one which will be decided by the village board, but he added, "I think they will have a real good idea (about eliminating the tax) after the next checks come."

Those checks are expected in late July or early August, he said.

WENDLAND'S report shows spending in most village departments was held to an average of 17 per cent below budget allotments because of reduced income. Expenses in categories such as utility costs and gas and oil, however, rose an average 32 per cent above budget allotments, the report indicates.

The highest increase came in natural gas costs, which rose 202 per cent from 1973 to 1974.

Wendland said early indications this year show income is about even or slightly higher than budget predictions. Building permit fees for the month of May, for example, reached $7,000, slightly higher than the $5,000 which had been expected.

Youth outreach plan may be ended

Schaumburg's youth outreach program may be dropped unless the village can come up with extra money to hire an assistant counselor to help with the heavy caseload.

Members of the village finance committee will meet at 8 p.m. Monday to review the current $7.9 million budget in an effort to come up with an additional $11,500 to pay the salary of an extra staff member.

"This is going to require intense thought and a hard look at all areas of the budget as well as possible new sources of revenue," Trustee Edward

G. Olsen, finance chairman, said Friday.

THE BUDGET REVIEW comes as a recommendation from the safety, health, recreation and environment committee after outreach worker James Sauer reported earlier this month he would be unable to continue unless assistance in handling his heavy caseload is provided.

The village budgeted $18,000 for the outreach program being held in conjunction with Twinbrook YMCA. Sauer was hired by the YMCA with his salary and office expenses paid by the village.

Sauer says he is now working with 12 Schaumburg families and six other youths experiencing social or emotional problems.

Olsen said he could not predict where the additional money will come from, adding he believes it is time for the village to "begin reevaluating priorities."

The finance committee will meet in Schaumburg Civic Center, Washington Room, 101 S. Schaumburg Ct. The meeting is open to the public.

Suburbs no longer have 'pioneer spirit'

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

When Warren and Irene Spaulding moved to the Prospect Meadows subdivision in 1951, they and their neighbors were suburban pioneers.

Families borrowed each others' cars, went picnicking at Lake Zurich and shared the block's single telephone.

The Spauldings have watched Prospect Meadows change for 25 years. Neighbors have come and gone and gradually, something has been lost. The sense of community the Spauldings enjoyed has been pushed out by a faster-paced suburban life that provides little time for neighborliness.

THE COUPLE will move from their house on Oriole Lane next month, leaving Mount Prospect for retirement in Florida. They will miss the old times most.

The former GIs and their families who bought homes in the early years were "a very friendly neighborhood," said Mrs. Spaulding. All the women were housewives, and they gathered for poker parties and exercise classes after dropping off their husbands at the commuter station. There was a time when 15 or 16 children would play in the Spauldings' front yard.

Almost everything was community property then, Mrs. Spaulding said. "We thought nothing of loaning cars or making trips into town for a neighbor," she said. "And in those days, if someone's kid misbehaved we'd give him a good whack or two."

BUT THINGS have changed on Oriole Lane. Only three or four original owners still live in the 16 homes. Younger families move in and out of the area almost yearly.

The coffee klatches and neighborhood picnics at Lake Zurich have been replaced by "a growing majority" of working mothers, said Mrs. Spaulding, who has no children and has not worked since World War II. The children usually stay in their own yards, and if they misbehave now "it's strictly hands off," she said.

"The kids have really changed," she said. "Seems like all we hear nowadays are sirens from Prospect High School or hot rods at 3 a.m."

BOTH THE CHILDREN and their parents stay to themselves, Mrs. Spaulding said. "Block parties are passe," she added. "With both parents working, there's no time for chitchat. People just don't want to get involved."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

Buglers fan out, perfecting an intricate routine

On, Guardsmen

The parking lot at Harper College rings with the blare of horns and the crack of drums as the Guardsmen of Schaumburg practice for competition. The 150-member drum and bugle corps is perfecting their routine for upcoming contests July 3 in Wheaton and July 4 in Hoffman Estates. Sponsored by the Schaumburg Chamber of Commerce and VFW Post 8080, Guardsmen corpsmen hail from 25 towns throughout the Chicago area.

Consultant hired to help with drug abuse program

Clarence Becker, an assistant principal in the Chicago public school system, has been hired as a consultant for the drug-abuse program in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54. Becker was hired by the Dist. 54 board Thursday at a cost not to exceed $1,000. Becker will assess the current drug abuse program in Dist. 54, make recommendations for modification of the program, assist district personnel in developing a plan of action and timetable for implementation of the revised program, and set up procedures for evaluating the program.

Becker is expected to make a progress report to the board in September.

He has worked with other school districts in the area on drug abuse education programs. He has worked as a member of the State of Illinois Drug Education team for three years and was a Chicago drug education coordinator. He has also taught drug education classes at Northwestern Illinois University.

THE BRIGHT LIGHTS and holiday atmosphere of Schaumburg Jaycees annual carnival are drawing persons of all ages to Town Square Shopping Center, Roselle Road south of Schaumburg Road. Hospital service area must be defined: NIPC

The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) will take no action on the Hoffman Estates hospital until the developers present a clear definition of the hospital's service area.

NIPC spokesman Ted Brzyski said American Mediacorp Inc., developer of the hospital, has proposed two service areas.

"If you define it one way, the hospital will have enough people to serve. If you define it a second — and more honest — way, there won't be enough people," Brzyski said.

"We're trying to get some handle on the situation. We just want somebody to tell us what the service area is so we can see if it's consistent with our population forecasts," he said.

BRZYSKI SAID the first area — which extends east to eastern Maine and Niles townships — would have a population of 500,000 by 1985 and could support the hospital. The second area — which includes Palatine and Schaumburg townships and parts of Barrington and Hanover townships — could not, he said.

"We find the population forecast for the second area extremely high. It's about 250,000 people more than the commission projects," he said.

American Mediacorp is scheduled to appear before NIPC at the July meeting. The hospital must be reviewed by the commission because of federal mortgage insurance sought by the developer.

THE SERVICE LEAGUE for a United Suburban Hospital, formerly associated with the Rush Medical Center, has registered a protest against the hospital. Mrs. Ida Lindsey, league president, said her group objects to the hospital being built in a recreational area but also feels the facility "won't give the kind of service the area needs."

"We can only complain to NIPC about the location of the site but we have been in objection to that hospital in general. We don't feel that company will put up a top quality medical facility," Mrs. Lindsey said.

The league is continuing to investigate the possibility of another developer building a hospital in the area.

"We feel we should pursue our effort to get top quality facilities to meet the medical needs of the area," she said.

44% polled favor football stadium at Arlington Park

by KURT BAER

A statistical survey of 400 Arlington Heights residents indicates that almost half of the persons polled favor the idea of a professional football stadium at Arlington Park Race Track.

Of the persons asked, 44 per cent said they favored the 80,000-seat stadium being built in Arlington Heights, 30 per cent said they were opposed, and a significant 25 per cent said they were still undecided.

The survey, directed by Paddock Publication's market research department, was initiated before it was revealed that the village was being asked to issue tax-supported general obligation bonds to pay for the stadium, variously estimated to cost from $25 to $30 million.

THE SURVEY used accepted market research practices and is considered statistically valid for the village at the time.

Other conclusions of the public opinion survey show that:

- Increased traffic congestion is the number one problem foreseen in having the stadium built in Arlington Heights.

- Residents would prefer that Madison Square Garden Corp. and the Chicago Bears were co-owners of the stadium.

- The main benefit from the stadium would be an increased revenue base for the village.

- Approximately half of the residents said they would favor the village issuing tax-free municipal revenue bonds if they would not increase local taxes. These bonds would be paid for with stadium proceeds.

Interviews were conducted between May 15 and June 10 by telephone and in person. The random sample was drawn to include every geographic section of the village, homeowners and apartment residents, persons with listed and unlisted telephone numbers, and approximately equal numbers of males and females.

Village residents indicated a high awareness of the stadium proposal, with 99 per cent of those contacted saying they knew about the plan.

On the question of whether the village should issue tax-free revenue bonds for the stadium, 47 per cent of those asked said yes, 39 per cent answered no, and 14 per cent were unsure.

"The village will be stuck with a white elephant if the stadium fails," one female resident living on S. Mitchell Avenue said.

"I would approve the bonds only if Arlington Heights gets some of the proceeds," said a N. Beverly Ln. resident. "I mainly oppose the stadium because I live right in the area where traffic would be a worry."

AMONG POTENTIAL problems from the proposed stadium, 84 per cent of the residents said they expected increased traffic congestion.

Additional village service costs such as police traffic control was identified as a problem by 66 per cent of the respondents; environmental pollution, car and bus fumes by 50 per cent; increased noise by 49 per cent; and increased crime because of the influx of people by 47 per cent.

Among the possible advantages of the stadium, 62 per cent said it could increase the revenue base for the village; 51 per cent agreed on the convenience of going to the stadium to see Chicago Bears football games; 47 per cent thought it would stimulate retail business; 37 per cent agreed it would lead to further development in the area; and 38 per cent said it would mean greater awareness of the Village of Arlington Heights.

"As far as convenience goes, I think the city will benefit," said a male resident living on W. Rand Road.

"If it doesn't cost me anything — I'm for it," said another resident on S. Princeton Avenue.

THE ALTERNATIVE of a domed stadium instead of the open-air stadium that is proposed for Arlington Park does not appear to affect residents' thinking on the stadium idea.

Only 34 per cent of those asked said they would be more receptive to the Arlington Park stadium if it were enclosed, while 44 per cent said their thinking would not be influenced by a dome. One resident in five said he was uncertain.

"A dome would be great because it might attract other sports like hockey," said a female resident on Champlain Street.

"It should be a multi-purpose stadium... used for other things," a S. Mitchell Avenue resident said.

On the important question of financing, the alternative most preferred by residents is to have Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of Arlington Park, and the Chicago Bears Football Club be co-owners of the stadium. Thirty-eight per cent of those asked said they favored this arrangement.

VILLAGE FINANCING with tax free municipal revenue bonds was preferred by 28 per cent; financing by the Chicago Bears was favored by 12 per cent; Madison Square Garden financing and operating the stadium was preferred by 9 per cent; and 13 per cent said they were uncertain or had no opinion.

"If it has to be built, let Madison Square Garden do it," said one resident.

"If George Halas wants to build a stadium he should use his own money," said a N. Highland Avenue resident who has lived in the village more than 10 years. "Mayor Daley will never let the Bears out of Chicago," he added.

Long-time village residents generally expressed more opposition to the stadium than newcomers. Among persons living in Arlington Heights 10 years or more, 34 per cent said they did not favor the stadium idea. Among persons who have been in the village for three years or less, 29 per cent said they were opposed.

Problems seen in future

City may drop private streets in new projects

Rolling Meadows may be about to abandon the practice of private streets in new subdivisions and townhouse or condominium apartment developments.

Edward Zale, representing Zale Construction Co., convinced the city council's public works, building and zoning committee Tuesday night of at least the theory that private streets spell problems for the future.

Zale was seeking city agreement to accept ownership of all interior streets in the Meadow Edge development, which includes townhouses and private homes. Court yards, cul-de-sacs, drives and parking areas would continue to be owned by a homeowner's association, he said.

ZALE SAID HE was concerned about the future, because "when we sell these houses, people really aren't aware of the fact they will have to pave streets 10 to 12 years from now."

When streets are privately owned, the owner, and not the city, must pay for street maintenance, including snow clearance, patching and paving. It can be a expensive proposition, and mandatory membership homeowners' associations in housing developments often assess residents an annual fee to build up a street maintenance fund.

In some area suburbs, associations have gone to local government and asked it to assume ownership after they recognized the expense. But if the streets are not built to comply with standards for municipally owned streets and are too narrow or do not have sufficient base, the municipality may refuse the request or require the association to repave the streets.

Zale said he knew his request would benefit persons buying homes in his development, but he also noted his project's streets meet all city standards except width, and parking is not allowed on them. The city's minimum width requirement is 27 feet, but Zale said his streets are 24 feet wide.

Two-month wait seen on sewer start

Rolling Meadows officials will have to wait at least two months to decide whether to install a sewer for which they received bids last December.

The decision could mean a new bike trail for Rolling Meadows. Because the line would pass through Kimball Hill Park, the city last winter considered restoring the construction site as a bike trail.

Or it could mean an increase in flooding problems for the waverly

ALD JOHN T. ROCK, 3rd, said municipal street ownership "is a tremendous idea, since we're going to wind up taking care of them eventually."

Ald. Thomas J. Waldron, 2nd, agreed, and said he has often worried about the time when homeowner groups confront the street maintenance problem. Ald. Daniel E. Weber, 4th, committee chairman, also said he agreed with the principle that Zale espoused, but he asked for a report from the city street department on maintenance costs and other impact of the plan.

Park area. Mayor Roland J. Meyer said.

JAMES MULDOWNEY, consulting city engineer, estimated it will be at least two months before it is possible to choose between installing the new sewer or rebuilding two lift stations, one at each end of the existing main.

The new sewer probably would cost a minimum of $171,000, the figure quoted in the lowest of 12 bids received. But it would eliminate the two lift stations, which have demanded regular expense for maintenance and constant surveillance during rainstorms over the past few years.

Cost of repairing the lift stations, to bring them up to state standards and eliminate some factors contributing to the maintenance needs, was estimated by Meyer at from $50,000 to $80,000.

The city council delayed its decision last winter to evaluate the effects of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg Township and other new sewers being installed to feed into it. The plant was scheduled for completion in May, but Muldowney said it is behind schedule and probably won't be finished before the end of July.

TO EFFECTIVELY evaluate the improved situation, Muldowney said, the city then will have to wait until after it experiences some heavy rainfalls.

The lines feeding into the Egan plant should relieve the Waverly Park problem, Meyer said last winter. But improving the city's system through the park may build-up the load on a major sewer along Euclid Road back to the point where it would renew Waverly Park flooding.

Although the new installation is most expensive, Muldowney believes it is the most economic long-range measure. Repairing the lift stations would suffice for awhile, he said, but the stations would have a built-in life, and in five to 10 years they would need major repairs again. He noted, however, city finances might force the council to choose the lift station work, with its lower immediate cost.

Meyer has said redesigning the stations could extend their built-in life, resulting in lesser long-range costs.

BUT THINGS have changed on Oriole Lane. Only three or four original owners still live in the 16 homes. Younger families move in and out of the area almost yearly.

The coffee klatches and neighborhood picnics at Lake Zurich have been replaced by "a growing majority" of working mothers, said Mrs. Spaulding, who has no children and has not worked since World War II. The children usually stay in their own yards, and if they misbehave now "it's strictly hands off," she said.

"The kids have really changed," she said. "Seems like all we hear nowadays are sirens from Prospect High School or hot rods at 3 a.m."

BOTH THE CHILDREN and their parents stay to themselves, Mrs. Spaulding said. "Block parties are passe," she added. "With both parents working, there's no time for chitchat. People just don't want to get involved."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

City may put plumber on staff

Rolling Meadows may put a licensed plumber on its payroll, if only for a short time.

The city's public works department has been trying for five months to devise a way to correct a water meter problem at Plum Grove Village, a condominium community on Kirchoff Road east of Plum Grove Road.

The work of an outside plumber will be required, and the department is now unable to write specifications necessary to seek bids for a plumbing contract, said Rod Blane, assistant public works superintendent. Blane said the department hoped to simplify the problem by not seeking bids and not signing a contract, but by hiring a plumber for a specified short-time period instead.

SPOKESMEN FOR the homeowners' association in the development last 'Six employees needed to staff engineer office'

Rolling Meadows would need at least six employees to staff a city engineering department, said consulting city engineer James Muldowney.

Muldowney's firm, Fletcher Engineering Co., does all city engineering work on a consultant basis. Ald. Raymond H. Neuckranz, 1st, has instigated a city study of the economics of continuing to use a consulting firm or hiring an engineer as a city employee.

Neuckranz cited the city's annual report for last year, which showed a total of $39,504 in fees paid to Muldowney's firm. About $3,600 was recouped in charges to developers for work related to their project plans.

NEUCKRANZ SAID there probably would be hidden expenses in staffing a city department, for such items as office space and furniture, and noted the engineer probably would need a draftsman and a secretary.

But neither Neuckranz or members of the city finance committee, which ordered the financial study, envisioned a staff of six persons. Muldowney suggested this week that a survey of suburban municipalities with engineering departments would clarify staff expenses.

The Village of Schaumburg is one such municipality. Its departmental budget for 1975-76 totals $120,000, including $10,000 for consultant work. The village department employs six persons full time and one person part time.

Any municipality, even those with engineering departments, must allow for consultant engineers, Muldowney said. A city the size of Rolling Meadows could not afford to hire a range of engineers with various specialties, and would, for example, have to use a consultant for water system improvements or some other area outside the specialty of the staff engineer.

THIS FIRM HAS 17 employees, four of them engineers. The rest include a secretary, an accountant and field crews. A city department also would need the secretary and field crews to conduct surveys and handle instruments, he said.

Muldowney said he charges only for work authorized by the city council. Some projects are billed on a specified fee basis; others are billed as a percentage of the total contract awarded in a construction project, and a small number of jobs are billed on an hourly rate, he said. He also noted review of proposed development plans are billed on a percentage of total project cost basis, but this billing is charged back to the developer whose plans are reviewed. He does not collect for work on developments that do not materialize, he said.

The parking lot at Harper College rings with the blare of horns and the crack of drums as the Guardsmen of Schaumburg practice for competition. The 150-member drum and bugle corps is perfecting their routine for upcoming contests July 3 in Wheaton and July 4 in Hoffman Estates. Land sought for public works use

The City of Rolling Meadows is negotiating with the Chicago Roman Catholic Archdiocese for a long-term lease for a small piece of land near Sacred Heart of Mary High School.

The city has been hoping for several months to increase vehicles storage and employ parking space at its public works building, 3200 Central Rd. But the site is bordered by park district land and property owned by the Catholic Church, part of the high school site at 2800 Central Rd.

Ald. Frederick Jacobson, 5th, said he has held preliminary talks with the Rev. Thomas Fielding, pastor of St. Colette's Church, about leasing a triangular strip of the Sacred Heart property, which is split from the main school site by Salt Creek.

The strip adjoins the public works property.

THE CITY ALSO is hoping to use a small section of park land and in exchange would offer the park district use of the tip of the triangular section.

Jacobson, working with the public works department, has developed a proposal to fence the area to be reserved for public works use, leaving a walkway along the creek for public access to that end of the park property.

44% polled favor football stadium at Arlington Park

by KURT DAER

A statistical survey of 400 Arlington Heights residents indicates that almost half of the persons polled favor the idea of a professional football stadium at Arlington Park Race Track.

Of the persons asked, 44 per cent said they favored the 80,000-seat stadium being built in Arlington Heights, 30 per cent said they were opposed, and a significant 25 per cent said they were still undecided.

The survey, directed by Paddock Publication's market research department, was initiated before it was revealed that the village was being asked to issue tax-supported general obligation bonds to pay for the stadium, variously estimated to cost from $23 to $30 million.

THE SURVEY used accepted market research practices and is considered statistically valid for the village at the time.

Other conclusions of the public opinion survey show that:

- Increased traffic congestion is the number one problem foreseen in having the stadium built in Arlington Heights.

- Residents would prefer that Madison Square Garden Corp. and the Chicago Bears be co-owners of the stadium.

- The main benefit from the stadium would be an increased revenue base for the village.

- Approximately half of the residents said they would favor the village issuing tax-free municipal revenue bonds if they would not increase local taxes. These bonds would be paid for with stadium proceeds.

Interviews were conducted between May 15 and June 10 by telephone and in person. The random sample was drawn to include every geographic section of the village, homeowners and apartment residents, persons with listed and unlisted telephone numbers, and approximately equal numbers of males and females.

Village residents indicated a high awareness of the stadium proposal, with 98 per cent of those contacted saying they knew about the plan.

On the question of whether the village should issue tax-free revenue bonds for the stadium, 47 per cent of those asked said yes, 39 per cent answered no, and 14 per cent were unsure.

"The village will be stuck with a white elephant if the stadium fails," one female resident living on S. Mitchell Avenue said.

"I would approve the bonds only if Arlington Heights gets some of the proceeds," said a N. Beverly Ln. resident. "I mainly oppose the stadium because I live right in the area where traffic would be a worry."

AMONG POTENTIAL problems from the proposed stadium, 84 per cent of the residents said they expected increased traffic congestion.

Additional village service costs such as police traffic control was identified as a problem by 66 per cent of the respondents; environmental pollution, car and bus fumes by 50 per cent; increased noise by 49 per cent; and increased crime because of the influx of people by 47 per cent.

Among the possible advantages of the stadium, 62 per cent said it could increase the revenue base for the village; 51 per cent agreed on the convenience of going to the stadium to see Chicago Bears football games; 47 per cent thought it would stimulate retail business; 37 per cent agreed it would lead to further development in the area; and 36 per cent said it would mean greater awareness of the Village of Arlington Heights.

"As far as convenience goes, I think the city will benefit," said a male resident living on W. Rand Road.

"If it doesn't cost me anything—I'm for it," said another resident on S. Princeton Avenue.

THE ALTERNATIVE of a domed stadium instead of the open-air stadium that is proposed for Arlington Park does not appear to affect residents' thinking on the stadium idea.

Only 34 per cent of those asked said they would be more receptive to the Arlington Park stadium if it were enclosed, while 44 per cent said their thinking would not be influenced by a dome. One resident in five said he was uncertain.

"A dome would be great because it might attract other sports like hockey," said a female resident on Champlain Street.

"It should be a multi-purpose stadium... used for other things," a S. Mitchell Avenue resident said.

On the important question of financing, the alternative most preferred by residents is to have Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of Arlington Park, and the Chicago Bears Football Club be co-owners of the stadium. Thirty-eight per cent of those asked said they favored this arrangement.

VILLAGE FINANCING with tax free municipal revenue bonds was preferred by 28 per cent; financing by the Chicago Bears was favored by 12 per cent; Madison Square Garden financing and operating the stadium was preferred by 9 per cent; and 13 per cent said they were uncertain or had no opinion.

"If it has to be built, let Madison Square Garden do it," said one resident.

"If George Halas wants to build a stadium he should use his own money," said a N. Highland Avenue resident who has lived in the village more than 10 years. "Mayor Daley will never let the Bears out of Chicago," he added.

Long-time village residents generally expressed more opposition to the stadium than newcomers. Among persons living in Arlington Heights 10 years or more, 34 per cent said they did not favor the stadium idea. Among persons who have been in the village for three years or less, 29 per cent said they were opposed.

Tax vote studied for fire upgrade

Palatine officials today will explore the possibility of holding a referendum this summer to increase taxes to finance improvement of the village fire department.

The trustees have agreed that the fire department is seriously undermanned but have not decided how to finance improvements. A proposal by the administration to increase the fire tax rate from 7.2 cents to approximately 52.7 cents per $100 assessed valuation will be one of the financing plans discussed by the board at its 9:30 a.m. committee-of-the-whole meeting at village hall, 54 S. Broadway St.

The 50 cent per $100 increase in the tax rate would eliminate the need for the quarterly sewer-user charge.

Trustees have indicated the impact of the tax increase on the average homeowner would be approximately $14.50 annually, although the tax bill a homeowner with a house assessed at $10,000 would increase $50 a year.

THE PROPOSED tax increase would make it possible to increase the number of full-time firemen from 13 to 40 and purchase a fire engine. The cost is estimated at $859,000 compared with a 1975-76 fire department budget of $423,300.

The trustees are trying to determine if 27 additional full-time firemen are needed next year.

When the village received its Class 6 fire rating in 1967, it was recommended that the number of full-time firemen be increased to 42. Another fire rating is due next year, and village officials believe that unless steps are taken to improve the fire department the village may lose its Class 6 rating. This would result in higher fire insurance rates for homeowners.

A 1974 review of the village fire department by Insurance Services Office, a rating agency, found the village more than 80 per cent deficient in personnel and equipment.

THE NUMBER OF calls the fire department responds to has increased from 478 in 1970-71 to 2,009 in 1974-75.

The village last year had to pay $98,686 for volunteer and off-duty firemen responding to fire calls because not enough full-time firemen were on duty. The cost is expected to increase to $142,404 this year.

WARREN AND IRENE Spaulding reminisce about their Mount Prospect neighborhood. A faster-paced suburban life has changed it in 25 years.

Suburbs no longer have 'pioneer spirit'

Life's hustle and bustle leave too little time for neighbors

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

When Warren and Irene Spaulding moved to the Prospect Meadows subdivision in 1951, they and their neighbors were suburban pioneers.

Families borrowed each others' cars, went picnicking at Lake Zurich and shared the block's single telephone.

The Spauldings have watched Prospect Meadows change for 25 years. Neighbors have come and gone and gradually, something has been lost. The sense of community the Spauldings enjoyed has been pushed out by a faster-paced suburban life that provides little time for neighborliness.

THE COUPLE will move from their house on Oriole Lane next month, leaving Mount Prospect for retirement in Florida. They will miss the old times most.

The former GIs and their families who bought homes in the early years were "a very friendly neighborhood," said Mrs. Spaulding. All the women were housewives, and they gathered for poker parties and exercise classes after dropping off their husbands at the commuter station. There was a time when 15 or 16 children would play in the Spauldings' front yard.

Almost everything was community property then, Mrs. Spaulding said. "We thought nothing of loaning cars or making trips into town for a neighbor," she said. "And in those days, if someone's kid misbehaved we'd give him a good whack or two."

BUT THINGS have changed on Oriole Lane. Only three or four original owners still live in the 16 homes. Younger families move in and out of the area almost yearly.

The coffee klatches and neighborhood picnics at Lake Zurich have been replaced by "a growing majority" of working mothers, said Mrs. Spaulding, who has no children and has not worked since World War II. The children usually stay in their own yards, and if they misbehave now "it's strictly hands off," she said.

"The kids have really changed," she said. "Seems like all we hear nowadays are sirens from Prospect High School or hot rods at 3 a.m."

BOTH THE CHILDREN and their parents stay to themselves, Mrs. Spaulding said. "Block parties are passe," she added. "With both parents working, there's no time for chitchat. People just don't want to get involved."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

PALATINE POLICE Deputy Chief Frank Ortiz and Frank Whitely, Rotary Club president, examine the department's new crime prevention bus that will be used beginning this summer in a neighborhood crime prevention and bicycle safety program. The bus was purchased and renovated for the department by the Palatine Rotary Club.

Two face drug, traffic charges

Mount Prospect police arrested two persons at Elmhurst Road and Euclid Avenue, Thursday on drug and traffic charges after they stopped the pair's car for having only one taillight.

Darlene A. Bogin, 19, of 641 Piper Ln., Wheeling Township, and Steven G. Millham, 20, of 2150 W. Hickory St., Palatine, were arrested on traffic charges, as police said Miss Bogin exchanged places with Millham to take the driver's seat after the car stopped. She was charged with drunken driving and he was charged with driving without a driver's license.

Each also was charged with possession of marijuana, after police allegedly found a marijuana cigaret in the car, and Miss Bogin was charged with possession of a controlled substance (barbiturate).

POLICE SAID Miss Bogin kicked Patrolmen Michael Salatino and Cherio Laureys as they tried to put her in a jail cell. She was then charged with aggravated battery.

Charges of unlawful use of a driver's license and possession of lost property were filed against Millham when police discovered he had a license made out to Robert A. Huber, 8415 Mason, Morton Grove, police said. They added that Huber later said he had lost his wallet a week ago in either Mount Prospect or Des Plaines.

Nine TVs at $135 each

Woman loses $1,200 in 'good deal'

A Palatine woman, who thought she could buy 23-inch color televisions for about $135 each, was conned out of $1,200 Thursday in Mount Prospect, police said.

Mount Prospect police said the incident began June 12 when the woman, Wendy Lipinski, 21 of 1492 Winslowe, Palatine, received a telephone call at work from a man who identified himself as Bill, a parcel service worker. He asked her if she wanted to buy a television cheaply and if she would be interested in selling others for him, police said.

The man called back Tuesday and during the second phone conversation, she told the man she would buy nine televisions.

MISS LIPINSKI was told to bring the money for the televisions, $1,200, to the Randhurst Shopping Center near Wieboldt's at noon Thursday. Arriving there, she was met by a man who called himself John.

John asked for her by her first name and the pair then went to Montgomery Ward's in the shopping center. She was told to stay downstairs while John went up to check on the televisions. However, John said too many people were in the television department and they would have to wait.

After they had coffee, John called Bill on a pay telephone and allegedly was told the televisions were being put on a truck. John then took the money from Miss Lipinski and told her to go back to her car and wait for the truck to pull up.

Miss Lipinski told police the truck never came.

Police said a check with Ward's revealed neither of the two men were employees of the store. An investigation into the case is continuing.

Special events set for senior citizens

The Palatine Senior Citizens Center, 248 S. Brockway St., will sponsor two special events for seniors next week.

The center will offer a free two-day review course on the "Rules of the Road" at the Palatine Township hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd. The course will be held Monday and Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. for senior citizens who will be renewing their driver's licenses.

The center also will host a shopping trip Wednesday to Randhurst, Mount Prospect. Reservations must be made in advance by calling 991-1112. The cost of the trip is $1.50 for the bus that will leave the center at 9:30 a.m. and return at 3:30 p.m.

'Island' homeowners seek annexation as protection

by LYNN ASINOF

A small group of homeowners living in a 99-acre "island" of unincorporated land surrounded by Mount Prospect has taken the first step towards annexation to the village in hopes of protecting the neighborhood.

"We are in the process of canvassing the people in this subdivision," Ken Rhead, 805 S. Busse Rd., said Friday. He said that if most people are interested in annexation, a special meeting will be called so the group can draft a petition for the village.

Rhead said the push for annexation is based on an apparent need to protect the neighborhood from subdivision of the area's large half-and-half-acre lots. The matter arose when Semar Home Builders petitioned for annexation and zoning to build four new homes on what is currently two lots on Lonquist Boulevard.

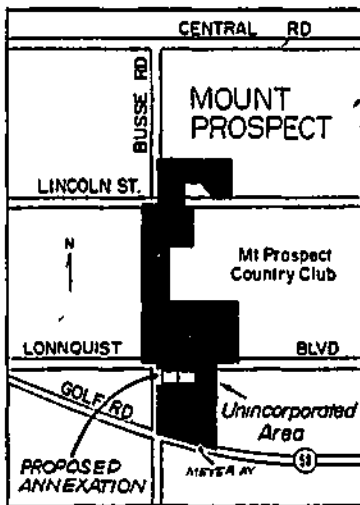

THE RESIDENTS would like to see the village create a special zoning classification or take other steps to preserve their neighborhood, which is wooded and still has some wild animals.

Although the village board has granted tentative approval of the Semar project, the residents are hoping their efforts to annex will at least modify the project. The group therefore is moving swiftly so they can approach the board before the Semar matter is finalized at the first board meeting in July.

The push for annexation is centered in the southern section of the island, which runs south of the Mount Prospect Country Club.

Rhead said residents from the northern section which extends north past Lincoln Street, also were present at the Thursday night planning session. "It is really too large to get a survey going there in the time we're talking about," Rhead said. "But people in the northern section are contacting others to see if there is a sense of going ahead with the whole area."

ALTHOUGH there are some "die hards" who don't want to annex to the village, Rhead said the current situation may convince these hard-liners to change their minds.

"It looks like we both have something the other wants," Rhead said, noting that the village is anxious to annex the island.

Trustee Edward B. Rhea Jr. told residents that he is in favor of protecting their distinctive neighborhood, but said the village can do nothing unless the area is annexed.

"I think that the village as it matures should have a divergence of neighborhoods rather than row after row of 65-foot lots," he said. Rhea said he does not know what type of protection the village would offer the residents, but said "I'm sure it can be done."

Police to auction at least 40 bikes

The Mount Prospect Police Dept. will auction at least 40 bicycles June 28 at the public works garage, 11 S. Pine St., Mount Prospect.

The auction will begin at 9:30 a.m. and residents will be able to inspect the bikes for 30 minutes beforehand. Police said anyone trying to claim a bike must have sufficient proof of ownership.

A few other items, such as individual golf clubs, will also be auctioned.

Library start at least month away

Work on the new Mount Prospect Public Library will not begin for at least a month because paperwork has not been signed.

Weather calls discouraged

Mount Prospect fire officials have asked residents not to tie up police and fire department telephone lines during weather emergencies with questions about conditions.

"We received about 100 phone calls within 20 minutes after the sirens were sounded last Tuesday," said Firefighter David Gold, aide to Chief Lawrence A. Pahlitz. "The police get buried by phone calls, too, and it is just at the time when we are trying to determine whether there are any real emergencies."

Most of the people who call are sim-

Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said this week the construction contract probably will not be signed for at least two weeks and possibly a month. "I'm waiting for all the bonds to come in, the insurance and so forth. This is a big project," he said.

The village board, at its June 3 meeting, approved awarding the general contractor work to Chell and Anderson Inc., Chicago. Chell will subcontract other work to the low bidders in four other work categories. The total contract to be signed is for $2,263,000.

LIBRARY BOARD Pres. John Parsons said, "I have no idea when all the paper work will be completed. It's just a long, winding, normal process."

Parsons did say he hopes the library will receive some state grant money between now and when the contract is signed. He said several bills which would provide monies for libraries have passed the House but have yet to be considered by the Senate.

One of the bills calls for $1 million in aid and Mount Prospect is one of two state libraries that would qualify for the money, Parsons said. "I don't know how they will divide the money if it is approved," he said.

The chances of federal grant money are dim, Parsons said, because Congress has refused to appropriate any funds for the Title Two grant program, under which the library would qualify.

THE LIBRARY also may be able to obtain some state money if Gov. Daniel Walker's accelerated building program is approved, Parsons said. He added the library has applied for grant money through the national Bicentennial Commission also.

The library will be built on the former Central School site, at the southeast corner of Central Road and Main Street. The building is to be completed within 400 days after the contract is signed.

WARREN AND IRENE Spaulding reminisce about their Mount Prospect neighborhood. A faster-paced suburban life has changed it in 25 years.

Suburbs no longer have 'pioneer spirit'

Life's hustle and bustle leave too little time for neighbors

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

When Warren and Irene Spaulding moved to the Prospect Meadows subdivision in 1951, they and their neighbors were suburban pioneers.

Families borrowed each others' cars, went picnicking at Lake Zurich and shared the block's single telephone.

The Spauldings have watched Prospect Meadows change for 25 years. Neighbors have come and gone and gradually, something has been lost. The sense of community the Spauldings enjoyed has been pushed out by a faster-paced suburban life that provides little time for neighborliness.

THE COUPLE will move from their house on Oriole Lane next month, leaving Mount Prospect for retirement in Florida. They will miss the old times most.

The former GIs and their families who bought homes in the early years were "a very friendly neighborhood," said Mrs. Spaulding. All the women were housewives, and they gathered for poker parties and exercise classes after dropping off their husbands at the commuter station. There was a time when 15 or 16 children would play in the Spauldings' front yard.

Almost everything was community property then, Mrs. Spaulding said. "We thought nothing of loaning cars or making trips into town for a neighbor," she said. "And in those days, if someone's kid misbehaved we'd give him a good whack or two."

BUT THINGS have changed on Oriole Lane. Only three or four original owners still live in the 16 homes. Younger families move in and out of the area almost yearly.

The coffee klatches and neighborhood picnics at Lake Zurich have been replaced by "a growing majority" of working mothers, said Mrs. Spaulding, who has no children and has not worked since World War II. The children usually stay in their own yards, and if they misbehave now "it's strictly hands off," she said.

"The kids have really changed," she said. "Seems like all we hear nowadays are sirens from Prospect High School or hot rods at 3 a.m."

BOTH THE CHILDREN and their parents stay to themselves, Mrs. Spaulding said. "Block parties are passe," she added. "With both parents working, there's no time for chitchat. People just don't want to get involved."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

SCRAPING THE Friendship Park greenhouse structure became an aerial job Friday for Mike Retzer, Bill Myers and Sue DeSmidt,

44% polled for football stadium

by KURT BAEK

A statistical survey of 400 Arlington Heights residents indicates that almost half of the persons polled favor the idea of a professional football stadium at Arlington Park Race Track.

Of the persons asked, 44 per cent said they favored the 80,000-seat stadium being built in Arlington Heights, 30 per cent said they were opposed, and a significant 25 per cent said they were still undecided.

The survey, directed by Paddock Publication's market research department, was initiated before it was revealed that the village was being asked to issue tax-supported general obligation bonds to pay for the stadium, variously estimated to cost from $23 to $30 million.

THE SURVEY used accepted market research practices and is considered statistically valid for the village at the time.

Other conclusions of the public opinion survey show that:

- Increased traffic congestion is the number one problem foreseen in having the stadium built in Arlington Heights.
- Residents would prefer that Madison Square Garden Corp. and the Chicago Bears be co-owners of the stadium.
- The main benefit from the stadium would be an increased revenue base for the village.
- Approximately half of the residents said they would favor the village issuing tax-free municipal revenue bonds if they would not increase local taxes. These bonds would be paid for with stadium proceeds.

Interviews were conducted between May 15 and June 10 by telephone and in person. The random sample was drawn to include every geographic section of the village, homeowners and apartment residents, persons with listed and unlisted telephone numbers, and approximately equal numbers of males and females.

Village residents indicated a high awareness of the stadium proposal, with 98 per cent of those contacted saying they knew about the plan.

On the question of whether the village should issue tax-free revenue bonds for the stadium, 47 per cent of those asked said yes, 39 per cent answered no, and 14 per cent were unsure.

"The village will be stuck with a white elephant if the stadium fails," one female resident living on S. Mitchell Avenue said.

"I would approve the bonds only if Arlington Heights gets some of the proceeds," said a N. Beverly Ln. resident. "I mainly oppose the stadium because I live right in the area where traffic would be a worry."

AMONG POTENTIAL problems from the proposed stadium, 84 per cent of the residents said they expected increased traffic congestion. Additional village service costs such as police traffic control was identified as a problem by 68 per cent of the respondents; environmental pollution, car and bus fumes by 50 per cent; increased noise by 49 per cent; and increased crime because of the influx of people by 47 per cent.

Among the possible advantages of the stadium, 62 per cent said it could increase the revenue base for the village; 51 per cent agreed on the convenience of going to the stadium to see Chicago Bears football games; 47 per cent thought it would stimulate retail business; 37 per cent agreed it would lead to further development in the area; and 36 per cent said it would mean greater awareness of the Village of Arlington Heights.

"As far as convenience goes, I think the city will benefit," said a male resident living on W. Rand Road.

"If it doesn't cost me anything — I'm for it," said another resident on S. Princeton Avenue.

THE ALTERNATIVE of a domed stadium instead of the open-air stadium that is proposed for Arlington Park does not appear to affect residents' thinking on the stadium idea.

Only 34 per cent of those asked said they would be more receptive to the Arlington Park stadium if it were enclosed, while 44 per cent said their thinking would not be influenced by a dome. One resident in five said he was uncertain.

"A dome would be great because it might attract other sports like hockey," said a female resident on Champlain Street.

"It should be a multi-purpose stadium... used for other things," a S. Mitchell Avenue resident said.

On the important question of financing, the alternative most preferred by residents is to have Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of Arlington Park, and the Chicago Bears Football Club be co-owners of the stadium. Thirty-eight per cent of those asked said they favored this arrangement.

VILLAGE FINANCING with tax free municipal revenue bonds was preferred by 28 per cent; financing by the Chicago Bears was favored by 12 per cent; Madison Square Garden financing and operating the stadium was preferred by 9 per cent; and 13 per cent said they were uncertain or had no opinion.

"If it has to be built, let Madison Square Garden do it," said one resident.

"If George Halas wants to build a stadium he should use his own money," said a N. Highland Avenue resident who has lived in the village more than 10 years. "Mayor Daley will never let the Bears out of Chicago," he added.

Long-time village residents generally expressed more opposition to the stadium than newcomers. Among persons living in Arlington Heights 10 years or more, 34 per cent said they did not favor the stadium idea. Among persons who have been in the village for three years or less, 29 per cent said they were opposed.

Residents who identified themselves as "avid sports fans" expressed above average receptiveness to the stadium. In this group, 52 per cent said they favored the stadium. The preference rate among nonsports fans was only 31 per cent.

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

A 20-year-old Buffalo Grove man was severely beaten Thursday by an off-duty Wheeling policeman during a fight at the Clayton House Motel, The Herald has learned.

Police agencies investigating the incident have refused to identify the beating victim, who reportedly suffered head and groin injuries.

He reportedly told Illinois State police, who responded about 3:15 a.m. to a report of a fight, that he was beaten by Wheeling Det. Joseph E. Seul in the washroom of the cocktail lounge at the motel, 1090 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling Township.

SEUL REPORTEDLY grabbed the man and questioned his age. The man resisted and Seul, who was not in a police uniform, struck him, The Herald learned.

Seul, a resident of Buffalo Grove, was unavailable for comment Friday and is in Ohio attending the wedding of another Wheeling police officer.

Seul and Lt. Ted Bracke, head of Wheeling's detective bureau, were questioned later Thursday about the incident by Police Chief Peter Guttilla, it was learned.

Bracke and Seul were drinking at the bar of the Clayton House before the fight started.

"I DON'T KNOW what started it," Bracke said in a telephone interview Friday. "I wasn't in on the situation. I wasn't there when the altercation took place."

But, Bracke outlined Seul's version of the incident:

"He (Seul) was leaving the washroom when the two boys walked in and insulted him." "He asked for identification, and they wouldn't show it to him. He produced a badge, because he was in plain clothes."

"As I was leaving (the bar), I heard some noise in the washroom. One subject was on the floor. Seul was bent over him."

"I said, 'Hey, what's going on? Break it up.' Officer Seul said the boy struck him in the mouth," Bracke said.

"I PICKED THE boy up and put some water on his face. He said, 'The cop struck me.' He said the guy showed him a Wheeling police badge."

The fight was witnessed by a friend of the injured man. The friend called state police, who later questioned the man, Bracke and Seul at Dist. 3 State Police headquarters in Des Plaines.

Guttilla, who has refused comment, is investigating the incident and has received reports from Seul and Bracke. Guttilla abruptly "hung up" on a Herald reporter who called to question him on Friday about the fight.

The Herald learned that Guttilla called relatives of the injured man Thursday and offered to set up a meeting between Seul and the youth in an apparent effort to block filing of a criminal complaint against Seul.

ALTHOUGH STATE police confirmed that a squad car responded to a call for assistance at the Clayton House early Thursday, a copy of the police report was unavailable. Officials of State's Atty. Bernard Carey's staff, who are probing the incident, also were unavailable for comment.

Neither the youth nor Seul asked to file criminal charges Thursday at Dist. 3 headquarters, Bracke said.

Bracke met Seul in the Clayton House bar after attending the Wheeling Lions Club carnival. "I left about 11 p.m. and stopped to get a bite to eat. I was going home and then decided to stop and see the Clayton House show. I was by myself. Seul arrived about 45 minutes or an hour after I did. We had a drink, smoked a cigarette and talked."

Bracke denied that Seul was drunk before the fight started. "We both had been drinking. I don't know about the youth. But Seul was not drunk," Bracke said.

BRACKE SAID he "gave the boy a very quick check for injury. It's hard to say if he was hurt or not. He seemed a little incoherent, but I asked him if he was okay and he said 'yes.' He said he had a headache."

"It was up to the state police to check for injuries," Bracke said.

Bracke denied that he told state police the Clayton House is within Wheeling police jurisdiction. The hotel restaurant is in unincorporated Cook County.

SEUL WAS ALSO convicted of disorderly conduct after a "bar ruckus" in Rockton, Ill., in 1972. Seul was charged by Rockton police after he became "abusive" in two bars and after "he was walking down the middle of the street causing cars to weave around him," Rockton police reports state.

The Clayton House was the scene of an incident involving Seul and sheriff's police who answered a report of a man with a gun at 7:10 a.m. Nov. 28, 1973. The man with the gun was Seul, but neither police agency would provide any details of the incident.

Weather calls discouraged

ply asking what the sirens mean and what precautions they should be taking, Gold said.

He issued the following guidelines:

Tornado Watch — Conditions are such that tornadoes may develop. No sirens are sounded.

Tornado Warning — If a tornado is sighted within 15 miles of the village the sirens are sounded. The signal is one minute steady blast, a pause and a second one-minute blast. Residents should go to a place of shelter, preferably a basement or interior hallway.

Air Raid Alert — A three-to-five-minute steady blast. Residents should turn on their radios for details of any possible danger.

Take Cover — A three-minute warning or intermittent blast means an enemy attack and residents should go to the nearest fallout shelter.

Gold said any time a severe weather or other emergency situation exists residents can usually get information from either radio or television. He said the warning sirens are tested at 10:30 a.m. on the first Tuesday of each month.

Civic group urges Bears referendum

The Greenbrier Civic Association has adopted a unanimous resolution urging the village board to hold a referendum on the financing and construction of the proposed Chicago Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track.

"The referendum should be conducted before the issuance of any general obligation bonds or other forms of financing that would increase the tax burden of the taxpayers of Arlington Heights," the resolution states.

The Greenbrier Civic Association represents 500 homeowners in the Greenbrier subdivision, Palatine Road and Kennicott Drive.

Parks pioneer remembers golden years

by DIANE MEIRIGAS

Elmer Crane is like the cornerstone of the Recreation Park community center that bears his name.

He proudly tells how he helped to develop the district's first community park and swimming pool in 1939, and how he served on the board until 1950.

And now, he says, both he and the park district "are sharing a golden anniversary."

Crane will return on Sunday to the Recreation Park he helped build. He and U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, (no relation) will participate in a special flag-raising, tree-planting ceremony to commemorate the park district's 50th anniversary. The 1 p.m. ceremony will kick off a day of activities and contests at the park, 500 E. Miner St.

"Oh, I remember a lot of things about this park district and the work we did on the board. A lot of funny things like chasing cows away from this pool. They used to graze in fields that were all around here years ago," Crane, 82, said as he pointed to the old, wooden frame houses that now surround Recreation Park.

"YOU KNOW, we had to have a $45,000 bond issue in the 1930s just to pay for this. But people didn't mind because they wanted parks and pools," he said.

"The people of Arlington Heights helped make this park district what it is, helped build it. It's their money that is in these buildings and parks," he said.

Tree planting to mark 50th year

Village Pres. James Ryan has proclaimed Sunday as "Park District Day in Arlington Heights" in honor of the park district's 50th anniversary.

Ryan will present the proclamation to park board members in a 1 p.m. ceremony at Recreation Park, 500 E. Miner St., to begin the day's celebration activities.

The ceremony will also be highlighted by the planting of a tree at the park to commemorate the anniversary. U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, and Elmer Crane, one of the first park district commissioners, will assist with the tree planting.

AMERICAN Legion Post 208 and the Wheeling Township Young Republicans will serve beer and brats at the legion hall across the street from Recreation Park.

Residents will be able to take rides in an 80-foot high hot air balloon. There will be swimming pool races, athletic contests, old-fashioned games and an ice cream social.

WARREN AND IRENE Spaulding reminisce about their Mount Prospect neighborhood. A faster-paced suburban life has changed it in 25 years.

Suburbs no longer have 'pioneer spirit'

Life's hustle and bustle leave too little time for neighbors

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

When Warren and Irene Spaulding moved to the Prospect Meadows subdivision in 1951, they and their neighbors were suburban pioneers.

Families borrowed each others' cars, went picnicking at Lake Zurich and shared the block's single telephone.

The Spauldings have watched Prospect Meadows change for 25 years. Neighbors have come and gone and gradually, something has been lost. The sense of community the Spauldings enjoyed has been pushed out by a faster-paced suburban life that provides little time for neighborliness.

THE COUPLE will move from their house on Oriole Lane next month, leaving Mount Prospect for retirement in Florida. They will miss the old times most.

All the women were housewives, and they gathered for poker parties and exercise classes after dropping off their husbands at the commuter station. There was a time when 15 or 16 children would play in the Spauldings' front yard.

Almost everything was community property then, Mrs. Spaulding said. "We thought nothing of loaning cars or making trips into town for a neighbor," she said. "And in those days, if someone's kid misbehaved we'd give him a good whack or two."

BUT THINGS have changed on Oriole Lane. Only three or four original owners still live in the 16 homes. Younger families move in and out of the area almost yearly.

The coffee klatches and neighborhood picnics at Lake Zurich have been replaced by "a growing majority" of working mothers, said Mrs. Spaulding, who has no children and has not worked since World War II. The children usually stay in their own yards, and if they misbehave now "it's strictly hands off," she said.

BOTH THE CHILDREN and their parents stay to themselves, Mrs. Spaulding said. "Block parties are passe," she added. "With both parents working, there's no time for chitchat. People just don't want to get involved."

But the Spauldings admit that in spite of all the changes, people still move to Oriole Lane for the same reasons they did when Mount Prospect's population was 4,500 instead of almost 50,000.

"It's still a heck of a lot better than Chicago," Mrs. Spaulding said. "But the best part of the neighborhood is gone."

Ryan to confer on bond figures for track stadium

James T. Ryan, Arlington Heights village president, will confer with representatives of Smith, Barney & Co., Chicago bond consultants, to check the financial figures that have been supplied in connection with a plan to build an 80,000-seat football stadium at Arlington Park Race Track.

Ryan said Friday the meeting is intended to get a second opinion on the general obligation bond projections supplied by Touche Ross & Co. and John Nuveen & Co. — two financial consultants hired by Madison Square Garden Corp., owner of Arlington Park, to work on stadium financing.

He also said that Nuveen & Co., which has been the village's bond consultants on several past bond issues, has submitted a proposal to work on the stadium bond issue for the village if it is approved by the village board.

"Nuveen came rather quickly to the conclusion that revenue bonds could not be used for the stadium, and I simply thought we ought to have someone else take a look," Ryan said.

THE MEETING with Smith, Barney is not intended as a "slap in the face" to Nuveen "which has been extremely helpful to the village in the past," Ryan said.

Smith, Barney was the village's agent in a $20 million revenue bond issue for Northwest Community Hospital last September, and Ryan said it was "sensible" to seek their opinion.

Other members of the village board, whom Ryan said he polled by telephone, agreed with the decision, he said.

Cost figures for the services of Smith, Barney, or Nuveen & Co. have not been discussed, he said.

On a total stadium general obligation bond issue of $29.76 million, Madison Square Garden's financial consultants say the annual debt would be $2 to $2.3 million.

TOTAL REVENUE to the village from the use of the stadium would be $3.2 million, or about 1½ times the debt requirement, the consultants say.

However if the stadium income fell short, the village would be obligated to pay off the 35-year bond issue with general funds, likely including real estate property taxes.

At a special meeting of the village board June 10, Walter W. Filkin, vice president of John Nuveen & Co., said the interest rate on revenue bonds, which would not carry the same overriding obligation, would be too high for the stadium project.

Cop accused of beating man in bar altercation

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

A 20-year-old Buffalo Grove man was severely beaten Thursday by an off-duty Wheeling policeman during a fight at the Clayton House Motel, The Herald has learned.

Police agencies investigating the incident have refused to identify the beating victim, who reportedly suffered head and groin injuries.

He reportedly told Illinois State police, who responded about 3:15 a.m., to a report of a fight, that he was beaten by Wheeling Det. Joseph E. Seul in the washroom of the cocktail lounge at the motel, 1090 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling Township.

SEUL REPORTEDLY grabbed the man and questioned his age. The man resisted and Seul, who was not in a police uniform, struck him, The Herald learned.

Seul, a resident of Buffalo Grove, was unavailable for comment Friday and is in Ohio attending the wedding of another Wheeling police officer.

Seul and Lt. Ted Bracke, head of Wheeling's detective bureau, were questioned later Thursday about the incident by Police Chief Peter Guttilla, it was learned.

Bracke and Seul were drinking at the bar of the Clayton House before the fight started.

"I DON'T KNOW what started it," Bracke said in a telephone interview Friday. "I wasn't in on the situation. I wasn't there when the altercation took place."

But, Bracke outlined Seul's version of the incident:

"He (Seul) was leaving the washroom when the two boys walked in and insulted him." "He asked for identification, and they wouldn't show it to him. He produced a badge, because he was in plain clothes."

"As I was leaving (the bar), I heard some noise in the washroom. One subject was on the floor. Seul was bent over him."

"I said, 'Hey, what's going on? Break it up.' Officer Seul said the boy struck him in the mouth," Bracke said.

"I PICKED THE boy up and put some water on his face. He said, 'The cop struck me.' He said the guy showed him a Wheeling police badge."

The fight was witnessed by a friend of the injured man. The friend called state police, who later questioned the man, Bracke and Seul at Dist. 3 State Police headquarters in Des Plaines.

Guttilla, who has refused comment, is investigating the incident and has received reports from Seul and Bracke. Guttilla abruptly "hung up" on a Herald reporter who called to question him on Friday about the fight.

The Herald learned that Guttilla called relatives of the injured man Thursday and offered to set up a meeting between Seul and the youth in an apparent effort to block filing of a criminal complaint against Seul.

ALTHOUGH STATE police confirmed that a squad car responded to a call for assistance at the Clayton House early Thursday, a copy of the police report was unavailable. Officials of State's Atty. Bernard Carey's staff, who are probing the incident, also were unavailable for comment.

Neither the youth nor Seul asked to file criminal charges Thursday at Dist. 3 headquarters, Bracke said.

Bracke met Seul in the Clayton House bar after attending the Wheeling Lions Club carnival. "I left about 11 p.m. and stopped to get a bite to eat. I was going home and then decided to stop and see the Clayton House show. I was by myself. Seul arrived about 45 minutes or an hour after I did. We had a drink, smoked a cigaret and talked."

Bracke denied that Seul was drunk before the fight started. "We both had been drinking. I don't know about the youth. But Seul was not drunk," Bracke said.

BRACKE SAID he "gave the boy a very quick check for injury. It's hard to say if he was hurt or not. He seemed a little incoherent, but I asked him if he was okay and he said 'yes.' He said he had a headache."

"It was up to the state police to check for injuries," Bracke said.

Bracke denied that he told state police the Clayton House is within Wheeling police jurisdiction. The hotel restaurant is in unincorporated Cook County.

SEUL WAS ALSO convicted of disorderly conduct after a "bar ruckus" in Rockton, Ill., in 1972. Seul was charged by Rockton police after he became "abusive" in two bars and after "he was walking down the middle of the street causing cars to weave around him," Rockton police reports state.

The Clayton House was the scene of an incident involving Seul and sheriff's police who answered a report of a man with a gun at 7:10 a.m. Nov. 28, 1973. The man with the gun was Seul, but neither police agency would provide any details of the incident.

Buglers fan out, perfecting an intricate routine

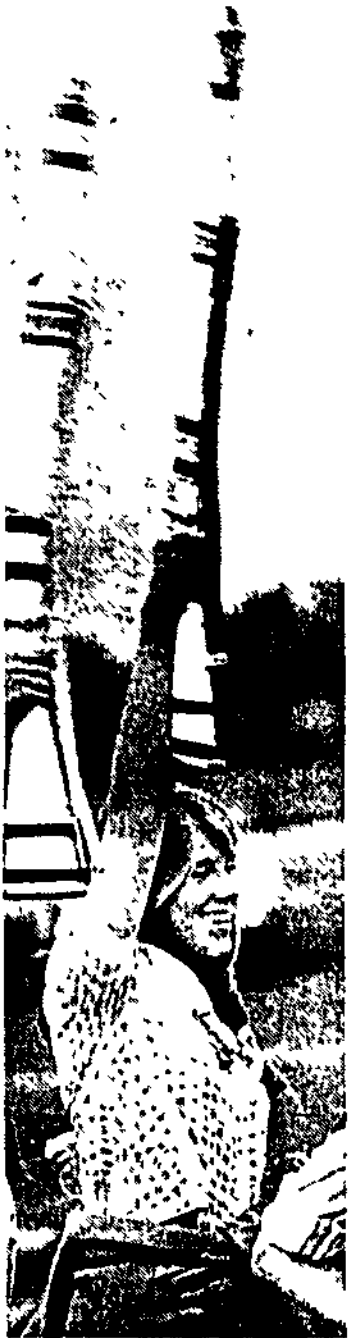

On, Guardsmen

that have taken place since he left the park board. The district now has 34 parks, 6 swimming pools, 6 community centers, 36 tennis courts and an annual budget of more than $1 million, he said.

"But, that's not the way it was when I started on the board," said Crane, who has written a history of the park district from 1925 to 1948.

THE PARK DISTRICT was formed in 1925 when Arlington Heights was a farming village of less than 4,000. The first parks were on the right-of-way along the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks. The district's first budget was about $1,335, Crane said.

"When the village annexed more land, so did the park district and the land came to us from developers. A lot of the land we purchased. And in every new neighborhood that developed, we made sure there were parks built there," he said.

So, as far as Crane is concerned, the park district's neighborhood-park concept "is no freak accident," he said.

"The park district is about the only institution, beside the church in this country, that gives the family a chance to do things together," he said.

"And I think that every board that ever guided this park district and any resident who ever lived here had to feel that way. The residents have always been generous to help develop the park district so there are enough parks and pools for everyone," Crane said.

"All the basic facilities are built. The district has had it's growing pains, and now it's in its senior year, just about ready to graduate I'd say."

CRANE SITS on a bench by the Recreation Park pool in the sun and points to the 85-foot flagpole that towers in front of the community center.

ers in front of the community center.

"See that flagpole? We raised the flag there the day we dedicated the park and all of the park commissioners put on their swim suits and went swimming in the pool here," Crane said.

"It was the only time I went swimming," he said.

He sits quietly for a minute watching a few young boys batting a softball around in the baseball diamond. A mother and her two youngsters walk across the park while a teenage boy and girl sit hand-in-hand beneath one of the park's large elm trees.

"Time doesn't change people or parks," Crane says, "It really all stays the same."
